House Group Backs GOP On Income Tax Stand

Votes Against Any Increases for Individual, for Levy Reshuffling

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

A majority of the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday formally indorsed the Republican stand against increasing personal income taxes, then approved a complicated reshuffling of the income and Victory tax levies designed to leave everyone's burden about where it is now.

Ways and Means Chairman Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina said the decision against increasing the present burden on the individual taxpayer was registered by a vote of 16 to 8. Accompanying this was a decision not to lower the present burden on any group.

Approves Integration

Then, with but one dissenting vote, the committee tentatively approved a five-point program designed to integrate the present Victory tax with the income tax structure without greatly changing any individual's present net burden. Main features of the program were:

1. Repeal the Victory tax.
2. Increase the normal tax rate from 6 per cent to 10 per cent.
3. Abolish the earned income credit.
4. Permit married persons filing separate returns each to take only a single person's exemption.
5. Provide that no tax shall be less than 3 percent of the net income in excess of a personal exemption of $500 for single persons, $700 for married persons and a credit for dependents equal to $100 each.

Simplified Procedure

For the average individual taxpayer, the sum total of all the changes would be translated into the actual tax he would have to pay by means of a simple table designed to eliminate perplexities for all up to $3000.

For the Administration, which asked for $10,500,000,000 in new taxes, it meant that the Ways and Means Committee had advanced about 12 million dollars along the line of revenue increases. The Treasury program has already been formally discarded by the committee.

Representative Knutson (Republican) of Minnesota, credited Chairman Doughton with originating the proposal for integrating the income and Victory taxes. Details were worked out by Colin F. Stam, creator of the Victory tax plan, and by the congressional tax staff which he heads.

Ban May Be Extended

The ban on tax increases, which the committee extended only to individual levies, may be enlarged today to cover corporate rates, and estate and gift taxes, from which the Treasury had hoped to raise about 1.5 billion dollars, along with 6:5 billion from individual increases.

Knutson said a motion will be made when the committee meets today to prevent corporate tax burden increases.

The committee's action was announced amid renewed indications that the strategy of members voting against income tax increases is

Cops Turn Cowboys, Timid Turn Pale as Wild Steers Take Over

RIBALD ROUND-UP—This steer, cornered in the alcove of the Postoffice Building at 12th st. and Pennsylvania ave., went through the police and over the balcony last night when the photographer's flash bulb went off. It was a question who got the madder—the steer or the police

Washington had its own round-up last night when dude cops and show cowboys chased six elusive and definitely wild steers, refugees from a show, through the sacred confines of Capitol Hill, on the stately Mall, and even around the White House.

Harassed by small boys tossing rocks at them, the steers broke out of an inclosure back of Uline's Arena, 3d and M sts. ne., at 6:30 p. m. and the six animals quickly scattered to the northwest and northeast sections of the city and were not rounded up until 12:30 a. m. today.

A play-by-play description went out over the police radio as Dispatcher Charles Clay, jr., directed police in cars and on motorcycles to the various scenes and gave cowboys, riding with Inspector Robert J. Barrett, a taste of life on the range until the last bit of unrationed beef was corraled.

As wild as any night on the range,

In preparation for the rationing of jams, jellies, preserves and fruit spreads on October 31, the Office of Price Administration yesterday ordered retail sales of these products suspended at last midnight.

Citrus marmalades were not included in the freeze order because supplies are adequate to meet present demands.

Due to fruit shortages from adverse weather conditions during the spring and summer, only 400 million pounds of the spreads are being manufactured—although the Food Distribution Administration had set a goal of from 500 to 600 million pounds.

Consumers were assured by OPA that they now can expect a good selection of preserves, jams, jellies and fruit butters on their local grocery shelves

Stocks had been generally withheld as a prelude to rationing, to make for equitable distribution throughout the country.

Blue stamps "X," "Y" and "Z" from War Ration Book 2 can be used from October 31 through November 20 to purchase the spreads, OPA announced, and green stamps "A," "B" and "C" from November 1 through December 20.

Kaiser Pledges Output Boost At Brewster

Tells House Probers 5 Times More Planes Can Be Produced

By Mary Spargo
Post Staff Writer

Henry J. Kaiser, war production genius and employer of a quarter of a million men, staked his reputation yesterday in a pledge to the House Naval Affairs Subcommittee that he would eventually be able to roll 10 U. S. Navy Corsair fighters a day off the production lines of the Brewster Aeronautical Corp.

The plants, currently under investigation because of past production failures, came under Kaiser's personal direction October 7, and is now producing two planes a day. In calm, solid tones, the builder of Liberty ships told the committee that he believed that from now on each month the Brewster plants would produce daily one

Swedish Airliner Shot Down; 13 Die

Stockholm (Saturday), Oct. 23 (AP).—Thirteen persons were killed late last night when a Swedish transport plane flying from England to Stockholm was shot down, presumably by a German fighter plane, off the west coast of Sweden.

A spokesman for the Aero-Transport Company said a radio message received from the plane before it crashed said: "Forced to make an emergency landing. We have been shot down."

Six Russians were said to have been passengers.

Wage Hearings Halt

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

The War Labor Board yesterday summoned United Mine Worker officials to a show cause hearing set for 10 a. m. today to explain why Alabama coal miners have not ended a 10-day-old walkout as coal strikes flared in seven States.

More than 34,000 miners were made idle by the spreading strikes, the Associated Press reported.

The walkouts, which originally involved 20,000 Alabama miners and then engulfed 3000 Indiana miners, spread to other States as a War Labor Board hearing on a proposed UMW agreement with Illinois operators indicated that the board might withhold unqualified approval of the pact in spite of confident predictions from Mine Leader John L. Lewis to the contrary.

Strikes in Five More States

An estimated total of 7700 miners were out in Kentucky, 1650 in Ohio, 1400 in Illinois, 600 in Pennsylvania, and 400 in Arkansas.

WLB officials who had been informed of some of the stoppages explained that they understood that a number of the walkouts grew out of local grievances and were unconnected with national wage questions or the return of the mines to their owners by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes on October 12.

On October 16, WLB ordered Alabama and Indiana miners to return to work. A WLB official stated that Indiana mine union officials were not summoned because the board understood that the Indiana walkout had ended, although the Associated Press re-

Yanks Beat Off Counterattacks, Capture Two Strategic Towns

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Algiers, Oct. 22. — Beating off enemy counterattacks at two points, American troops of Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's Fifth Army have captured the strategic inland Italian towns of Alife and Piedimonte d'Alife to harass German efforts to install themselves in new mountain defensive positions north of the Volturno River, Allied Headquarters announced today.

Seizure of the two towns in advances north and northeast from Dragoni, captured two days previously, placed the Americans in position to continue their thrust along both banks of the Upper Volturno toward Venafro, 18 airline miles away, where the Nazis have sunk the inland anchor of their new defense line.

Both at Alife and at Cancello, where British troops hold positions 8 miles inland from the mouth of the Volturno, the Germans struck back with everything in their arsenal in an effort to relieve the Allied pressure, but in each instance Clark's alert forces met them with a withering fire that threw the Nazis back and littered the field with bodies.

Allied Concentrations Reported

(Berlin dispatches to the Spanish press relayed German reports that an Allied thrust against Rome from the air and from the sea was imminent. Spanish correspondents in Berlin said the Germans had reported that heavy Allied naval concentrations were maneuvering off Ostia, at the mouth of the Tiber, and that Allied parachute troops were standing alert at many air fields.)

In addition to its manifold duties, the Allied air fleet gave aerial support to the Yugoslavs, shooting down an entire squadron of six Junkers-87 Stukas. German shipping was attacked in the Adriatic, and RAF Wellington bombers smashed railway installations by night along the Italian side of that sea.

The violent German counterattacks at Alife and Cancello obviously were designed only to disrupt Allied plans for a close pursuit of the enemy and to give Field Marshal Albert Kesselring's forces more time to withdraw troops and heavy equipment to

World's Largest Warships

Three 45,000-Ton Carriers For Bombers Ordered by Navy

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Three huge 45,000-ton aircraft carriers, capable of handling big bombers of a size now operating only from land bases, are to be built by the Navy, Secretary Knox announced yesterday.

The giant craft are expected to be the largest and most costly warships ever constructed.

Two of the supercarriers will be laid down "right away," Knox said. The keel of the third will be laid next year. Estimated building time was not announced, but our present 27,000-ton carriers take about a year from keel-laying to launching and another 8 to 10 months before they are ready for action.

Besides being capable of handling more powerful bombers—twin-engined instead of single-engined craft—the new-type "flat-tops" will be faster than existing craft, and will carry more planes, armor-plate and guns, Secretary Knox said.

"These aircraft carriers," said the Navy announcement, "the largest known ships of their type in the world, will be the base of operations for planes larger than any which heretofore have operated from the decks of aircraft carriers."

Knox was asked whether this meant larger craft than those now normally assigned to the ships, or larger than the North American B-25 Mitchells which took off from the Hornet and bombed Tokyo. The long-range, land-based Mitchells made only the one take-off from the Hornet's deck, using special equipment, and were not capable of landing on a carrier.

The Navy chief said the new craft would be able to handle larger planes than the Mitchells. He did not disclose whether or not such big bombers both could take off and land on the 45,000-ton carriers, or only be capable of shuttle bombing operations, such as on the Tokyo raid.

Although the new flat-tops have

Army Orders Reorganization Of Troop Units

Infantry Division's Size to Be Reduced, Firepower Increased

By the Associated Press

A sweeping reorganization of various types of Army troop units, adopting the battle lessons of the war and designed to improve the fighting efficiency of the ground combat forces, has been ordered by the War Department.

The Army and Navy Register, unofficial but authoritative service weekly, will publish today a partial text of War Department circular No. 256, dated October 16, which discloses:

(1) The infantry division, of approximately 15,000 men, is being reduced 8 per cent in strength and 14 per cent in motor vehicles, at the same time being greatly increased in firepower.

(2) The motorized division is eliminated as a separate type of organization. Infantry divisions will be transported by a troop transport battalion, and all infantry division training will include such transportation.

(3) Regimental organizations are eliminated in the armored division, which in the future will have three tank and three armored infantry battalions of increased size and strength, the division's artillery and infantry strength being greatly

Hitler Calls Regents Of Bulgaria as Balkan Threat Grows Graver

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 22.—The great Allied Northwest Africa Air Force extended its manifold activities to give aerial support to Yugoslav ground troops, it was announced today, a few hours before Adolf Hitler, confronted by a Balkan problem growing graver every day, had called in the regents of Bulgaria for a conference.

In the initial engagement of the new Balkan aerial operation, American Warhawk fighters shot down an entire flight of six Junkers 87 Stukas that had been sent out to dive bomb Yugoslav Partisans along the Dalmatian Coast.

As the Yugoslavs have no air force of their own, the Nazis went on the mission apparently confident of encountering no opposition in the air. Upon being intercepted by the American fighters, they attempted to escape, but the Warhawks chased them through valleys and clouds until the last one was destroyed.

As the Warhawks carried the aerial war to Dalmatia, American Lightning fighters again bombed the important Serbian rail center of Skoplje, and German shipping in the Adriatic also was attacked

Tank Thrust May Drive Still More Germans Into River Trap

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), Oct. 23.—Russian forces have slashed to within 31 miles of Dnepropetrovsk from the west and within 18 miles of Krivoi Rog as they forced hundreds of thousands of German troops into the Dnieper River elbow, Moscow said today.

To the northwest, below Kiev, the Russians suddenly thrust out tank columns from their bridgehead at Pereyaslav in a drive that may catch even more German troops in the river loop. A major tank engagement ended with 32 wrecked German machines, a Russian bulletin said.

Fierce fighting raged in the last part of Melitopol, held by the Germans after 10 days of street fighting—the northern district—while north of the city the Russians cracked several German strong points and beat back German counterattacks with heavy Nazi losses, said a midnight communique supplement recorded by the Soviet monitor here.

More Than 50 Towns Taken

More than 50 towns and hamlets fell to the advancing Soviet troops in the Dnieper bend area, where the Russians captured Verkhnedneprovsk on the river and the railway station of the same name several miles away to the south. This drive, paralleling the Dnieper River on the west bank, was hurling back the Germans to Dnepropetrovsk, already hemmed in by Russians camped on the east bank.

The fall of the Verkhnedneprovsk rail station put the Russians astride the Dnepropetrovsk-Kiev line, only 31 miles from Dnepropetrovsk. It also cut off that German garrison's most direct communications with imperiled Krivoi Rog.

Other Russian columns were swinging south toward Krivoi Rog, a strategic rail junction and iron center. With yesterday's capture of Iskrovka, 18 miles to the north, they were approaching within artillery range of their objective. Znamenka, a rail terminal far to the northwest, also was threatened by Russians only 16 miles away. A strong force of Soviet planes raided Znamenka Thursday night, bombing a concentration of German military trains and starting many fires.

The Germans hurriedly pushed

Pulverizing Load Of Bombs Falls At Finschhafen

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific (Saturday), Oct. 23 (AP).—Many Japanese soldiers were killed and their jungle defense leveled Thursday by a record weight of 221 tons of bombs dropped by Liberators assaulting the imperiled positions northwest of Finschhafen, New Guinea, from which the enemy is making frantic efforts to escape entrapment.

The bomb weight, particularly large when the almost pinpoint target is considered, was the heaviest ever unloaded in a single day's attack on New Guinea, although it was exceeded by the 350 tons dropped on the much larger Rabaul, New Britain, October 12.

(In the past such pulverizing air assaults by General MacArthur on New Guinea jungle defenses of the Japanese have preceded and operations of moment.)

Pals Stick to Riddled Fortress Carrying Body of District Flier

Crew members of the Flying Fortress in which Lieut. Robert H. Bolick, 22, of 4322 Fessenden st. nw., was killed during the raid over Schweinfurt, Germany, October 14, stuck by their badly crippled ship and brought it back to a field in England rather than desert their dead pilot, it was revealed yesterday in an Associated Press report from London.

Lieutenant Bolick was killed and his copilot badly injured, the report said. Consequently Navigator Miles McFann, who had never flown anything but small one-engined planes, took the controls and despite the 132 bullet holes that riddled the ship, brought it back to England. They returned from the raid in which America lost 60 Flying Fortresses.

"We could have bailed out of course," McFann said, "I suppose a lot of fellows wouldn't want to take the chance of having a navigator act as pilot, but they weren't sticking because of their confidence in me. They all knew that Bolick was dead inside the ship and none of us was going to bail out and leave him there."

Lieutenant Bolick was the son of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Bolick, also of the Fessenden st. address. He was married January 17, 1942, to the former Miss Margie Kern of South Carolina.

He was a graduate of Western High School, and before entering the Air Forces, worked with the Western Electric Co. here and later at the Washington Navy Yard. He went overseas last August. His parents were notified of his death October 20.

De Marigny's Alibi Presented For Night Oakes Was Murdered

By the Associated Press

Nassau, Bahamas, Oct. 22.—Alfred de Marigny's own statement that he was at home, in bed and asleep during the early morning hours when his millionaire father-in-law, Sir Harry Oakes, was being killed last July, was read today to the Bahamas Supreme Court jury which is trying him for murder.

But even before Attorney General Eric Hallinan placed de Marigny's indignant denial in the record, he produced testimony to cast doubt on the defendant's story.

The slender 35-year-old husband of Sir Harry's daughter Nancy gave his statement to police when he was arrested July 9—the day after the gold-mining tycoon was struck four times on the head and his body set afire while he slept in his country home, Westbourne.

"It is a ridiculous charge," de Marigny declared. "I had no reason to do it."

Telling about a dinner party previously described by witnesses, De Marigny said he retired at his Victoria Avenue cottage about 2:30 a. m. after driving two of the guests to their home near Westbourne. He was awakened at 3:15 a. m. when his friend and fellow occupant, Marquis Georges de Visdelou, drove away in his automobile and returned 15 minutes later.

De Marigny said he asked the marquis to take his Maltese cat, Grisou, upstairs because the animal was annoying him. Then, De Marigny said, he slept until sunrise.

Fresh in the minds of the jurors as they listened to the account was the testimony of the defendant's next-door neighbor, Howard Lightbourne.

Returning home at 12:30 a. m.

Mad Dogs Bite Two Children As D. C. Acts to Curb Epidemic

The District Health Department revealed yesterday that two children, one 2 and the other 5, had been bitten by mad dogs this week, as the Commissioners took steps toward alleviation of the situation by assigning to the dog pound a truck and four men from the sewer department whose duty it will be to remove stray animals from the streets.

Coincident with the action by the Commissioners, the Health Department said that "a rabies epidemic is current locally," and warned citizens to watch for strange acting dogs and to report any such animal running loose.

Existing regulations do not permit the pound master to capture licensed dogs unless they are vicious or have bitten someone. He is permitted to pick up only unlicensed stray dogs.

The children who received face wounds from rabid pets were identified as Arthur Cameron, 5, of 212 Sixth st. se., and Jane Ann Ryan, 2, of 2316 Q st. se. Both are under the care of a physician and have received initial injections to prevent hydrophobia.

The dogs were found to be rabid by health department chemists yesterday. Parents of the children were notified.

Arthur, the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Cameron, was scratched on the face Monday by his "just dog" pet. The dog, it was said, was bitten by another in the neighborhood about three weeks ago.

Mrs. Cameron said the dog was taken to a veterinarian and killed, Wednesday.

Accuse Italians

Germans Tell Of Plot to Kidnap Hitler

By E. C. Daniel
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Oct. 22.—The German high command charged today that King Vittorio Emanuele and Marshal Badoglio of Italy had plotted to lure Adolf Hitler to Italy, kidnap him and turn him over to the Allies, along with Benito Mussolini.

Quoting captured Italian military "documents," the high command charged that Marshal Badoglio had invited Hitler to Italy to confer with him and the King.

"The invitation was refused coolly," said the German news agency DNB in a broadcast recorded by the Ministry of Information. "It came at a time when the handing over of the Duce was decided and sealed. Today it is known that the King and Badoglio arranged with the enemy to place into his hands the Fuehrer as well as the Duce."

Prime Minister Churchill disclosed on September 21 that the Badoglio government had planned to keep Premier Mussolini in Allied hands, but that he had been allowed to escape, with the aid of German parachutists, by Italian caribinieri who "failed in their duty" to guard him.

According to Berlin's statement today, Hitler was invited to Italy by the Italian military attache in Berlin acting in the name of the King and Badoglio. "It is obvious," said Berlin, "that the invitation was given to the Fuehrer" in order to trap him.

Although Hitler and German propaganda outpourings indicated at the time of the Italian capitulation that the move came as a surprise to Germany, the high command statement asserted that the German government became aware as early as August 15 of Marshal Badoglio's intentions. The surrender was announced September 8.

The statement disclosed for the first time that even before the Italian surrender was announced three Italian divisions stationed on the frontier resisted German units advancing into the Adige Valley on September 7.

This resistance was laid to orders of Gen. Mario Roatta, Italian chief of staff. General Roatta now is in the Badoglio government over protests of both the Yugoslavs and the Greeks.

Italy's intention of deserting Germany became apparent to Berlin, the high command's statement continued, at a conference at Bologna on August 15, between German Field Marshal Edwin Rommel and General Roatta, attended by their aides.

General Roatta, Berlin said, tipped the Italian hand by proposing that Italian troops alone should occupy Rome, all major harbors, and all passes to Germany, France and Croatia through which the Germans might enter Italy.

According to today's story from Berlin, the German generals did not give any sign that they were aware of General Roatta's "aims."

800 Paratroopers Helped Disrupt Enemy's Plans

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Oct. 22.—One more German push might have driven the Fifth Army from its Salerno bridgehead in the critical days of the Nazi counter-attack below Naples, Allied Headquarters disclosed today.

The landing of parachute troops as reinforcements at this juncture, however, helped disrupt the enemy's plans. Of 800 parachute troops dropped at Avellino, northeast of Naples and some 14 miles behind the German lines, most were thought at first to have been killed or captured. All but 150 finally rejoined the Allied force, however.

While the Germans have taken losses in their retreat, these probably have been less than those suffered by the Allied armies.

4-Phase Operation

A headquarters commentator divided the operations into four phases— (1) establishment of the narrow beachhead at Salerno; (2) the fierce German counterattacks on the fourth and fifth days; (3) occupation of Naples, and (4) crossing of the Calore and Volturno Rivers.

As to the future, he said the Germans would continue brisk counter-attacks to slow the Allies, but would hardly risk a major counter-offensive this side of Rome.

Major factors contributing to initial success, he said, were the Italian capitulation, which upset the Germans, and the fact that they did not know exactly where the main Allied debarkations would be made.

The Germans had a good chance to attack while Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's Americans and British were "half in and half out of the sea" but decided to await developments, the analyst said.

But four days after the landing, the Germans apparently were satisfied they had the Allied plan of operations diagnosed and launched terrific attacks along the River Sele, using a heavy concentration of tanks.

Missed Big Chance

"He came very close to driving us out," the commentator said. "The beachhead was the narrowest there and there were a certain number of untried troops in line. He almost drove a wedge, by following the river, to the sea. If he had gotten to the sea he could have cut the Fifth Army in two and prevented further landing operations.

"The Allies had to pull back and for a time there was considerable alarm. But some hard-boiled American officers in command at that place were determined the enemy was not going to advance. The Allied troops opened a fire which created the idea they were there in greater strength than was the case. At the height of the German counterattack, if they had given one more push, they might have got through."

Like Shot in Arm

Having saved its beachhead, the Fifth Army got a psychological shot in the arm when Gen. Sir. Bernard L. Montgomery's Eighth Army pushed through from the south to link up with it.

Naples was entered in 22 days after the landings, 5 days behind schedule.

The Germans then formed their line of seven divisions from the Tyrrhenian to the Adriatic with an armored division at each end.

"As the Germans once showed us how to advance they then showed us how to retreat," the commentator said in tribute to their skill.

The German front consists of three lines, he said. When badly battered, the foremost line retires through the second leaving that in front, and takes up a new position farther back.

Twelve days after entering Naples, the Fifth Army launched its attack on the Volturno line, and because the enemy opposition was so fierce, it was unable to throw a bridge across the river for the first 24 hours.

The commentator said Italian sabotage behind the German lines was much less than it might have been had the Italians been more resolute. Italy's 62 divisions are now mostly disarmed, he added.

British, Canadian and Indian forces of Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's Eighth Army, meanwhile, consolidated positions they gained earlier in the week and sent patrols thrusting into enemy territory. They met with what was officially termed "varying resistance."

The day's principal air blows were aimed against Nazi communications both north and south of Rome, upon which the enemy is heavily dependent for the movement of reinforcements and supplies necessary for a prolonged stand before the capital.

For the first time in many weeks the Germans made a serious effort to halt the deluge of bombs. Fifteen enemy fighters swarmed up to attack a formation of Marauder medium bombers that was hammering a railway bridge at Acquapendente, 55 miles northwest of Rome, but escorting Lightnings knocked down six of the attackers and drove the others off.

RAF Beaufighters, protecting an Allied convoy off the North African coast, shot down four German bombers. In all, 17 German planes were officially reported destroyed in the day's engagements, against a loss of one Allied craft.

Greeks Warned On Internal Quarreling

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Oct. 22.—Warning the Greeks against "internal quarrels," Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, commander of the British Ninth Army, today ordered that "fratricidal strife" in Greece must cease.

His message to the Greeks took official cognizance for the first time of small scale quarreling between two groups, the leftists and the guerillas, in the mountains of Greece.

General Wilson told the Greeks bluntly that the United Nations were looking to them to "fight on shoulder-to-shoulder so the coming day of freedom will not be postponed."

The collapse of Italy, he declared, has confronted the Germans with a serious problem in the Balkans and particularly in Greece.

"Germany cannot afford to withdraw troops from other fronts. She can only hope to remain in Greece if she can weaken you by internal quarrels. This is Germany's last gamble and it is the responsibility of each one of you to see that this gamble fails," he asserted.

"I wish to warn you that Germany is not yet beaten and that she is still very strong."

The commander said the great Allied victories of the past year have been due to "united strategy where all have worked together regardless of those differences which must be sunk in the stress of war."

Minor fighting between the leftists and guerillas in Greece, which apparently has been encouraged by the Germans, is the result of their different war aims. This fighting never has been on a scale resembling civil war but it has aided the Germans in that it has sapped energies which would be better employed against German forces.

by Allied planes.

On the ground guerillas charged into Europe's second largest iron mine in Croatia and wrecked all the installations there, capturing the nearby city of Boseanska Dubica, the Partisan army announced. One hundred and twenty prisoners and 360 rifles and other war materials were reported taken in the city's capture.

The Berlin radio disclosed tonight that the regents met with the Fuehrer and his highest military aides.

The meeting was held last Monday, the announcement said, as both military and political developments indicated increasing difficulties for Germany. A report from Madrid today said German peace overtures to Russia had been made recently in Sofia, the Bulgarian capital, and had been turned down flatly.

High Nazis Participate

The German announcement said high Nazi officials took part in the meeting with Prince Cyril, younger brother of the late King Boris, and Bogdan Philov, premier until his recent election as regent and strong man in the German satellite country. The announcement came as the Germans expressed belief that an Allied invasion from the Black Sea through Rumania and Bulgaria was being planned.

The broadcast said German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, Field Marshal Gen. Wilhelm Keitel of the high command, and Gen. Alfred Jodl, chief of the armed forces guidance staff, also met the Bulgarians.

The regents are ruling Bulgaria for the boy King, Simeon, II, 6-year-old son of King Boris, who died September 28, after a visit to Hitler.

The Madrid reports said Count Werner von der Schulenburg, the last German Ambassador to Russia, had approached a Russian diplomat in Sofia three times with peace proposals and had been turned down.

He was reported to have suggested to V. G. Dekanozov, the last Russian Ambassador to Berlin and now Ambassador to Bulgaria, that if Russia would quit the war and keep hands off the Balkans the Germans would retire to the 1940 frontiers. Then he was said to have proposed that Russia could have a free hand in the Balkans, with the exception of Hungary and Croatia.

Iron Mine Captured

The Balkan battlefield, meanwhile, continued active.

In southern Yugoslavia, bombers of the northwest African Air Force which first bombed Skoplje and then followed up with an attack on Nis, 100 miles to the northeast, returned to pound Skoplje's rail lines yesterday.

Sixteen miles to the south of Bosanska Dubica, the iron mine of Lyubiya was wrested from the Germans. Still farther south, units of the Twelfth Dalmatian Division planted the Partisan banner on the island of Sipanj, near Dubrovnik, on the Dalmatian coast.

in several infantry divisions, some of them coming from as far as Norway, Holland and France as they sought to avoid complete disaster. Moscow reports said the Nazis had lost all semblance of a line in this area and were hastily improvising defenses.

The new Red Army smash below Pereyslav came many days after the Russians announced they had established a bridgehead there across the Dnieper.

The fighting apparently had subsided until yesterday, when the Russians gathered an important tank force and launched a drive which may strike west toward the Bug River, aim at the lateral railroads connecting German defense fronts, cut north to further flank Kiev, or southward to back up the Dnieper bend drive.

More than 1500 Germans were killed inside Melitopol's battle-wrecked and flaming streets, the Russians said.

A howling southerly wind—so strong at times that fighters could hardly stand upright—added to the din of cannon and machine gun in the battle for Melitopol, southeast of the Knieper bend, Moscow reports said.

A dispatch to the Moscow newspaper Izvestia said the ruined city, where once 25,000 people lived, is ablaze and the beautiful orchard country on its outskirts ruined by battle.

Parley Atmosphere 'Cheery'

By Eddy Gilmore
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Oct. 22.—In an atmosphere of cheer and friendly cooperation the foreign ministers of the United States, Britain and Russia conferred again today on world-vital matters, and it was suggested that the talks had veered into political channels.

Today's conference, the fourth between United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull, British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and Soviet Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov, began an hour earlier than the others in an atmosphere described as "very cheerful."

Decisions are understood to have been reached already on some of many political questions under discussion. This did not mean, however, that the political action was as important as the military action taken—or to be taken.

As for official announcements of what has been said behind the conference doors in Spiridonovka Palace, however, there have been none and will be none until the historic parley ends. It has been intimated that Hull may meet newspapermen formally as the end of the talks near, and that the British and Russians also may say something publicly at the same time.

Yesterday, Premier Joseph Stalin traded his khaki suit and high boots for a new marshal's uniform, with epaulettes and long pants, and greeted the British Foreign Secretary, and there were indications he would see Hull soon.

American and British military advisers attended yesterday's four-hour session.

After today's session, which lasted 3½ hours, it was learned that Molotov was presiding at the talks. Molotov had suggested at the outset that the chairmanship rotate, but both Hull and Eden said they would be pleased to have the Russian diplomat preside right along, it was said.

President Pledges Filipinos Freedom

Says U. S. Will Not Recognize Japs' Puppet Regime

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt said yesterday that the United States never will consider as lawful any act of the puppet government set up in the Philippines by the Japanese.

In a statement, Mr. Rosevelt noted that this government was set up October 14 with Jose P. Laurel, formerly a justice of the Philippine Supreme Court, as "president." Its first act, he said, was to sign a military alliance with Japan and its second was "a hypocritical appeal for American sympathy."

To Drive Out Invanders

Reiterating that the United States will use all its resources to drive the invaders from the islands and establish a truly independent Phillippine nation, the President added:

"Our sympathy goes out to those who remain loyal to the United States and the commonwealth; to that great majority of the Filipino people who have not been deceived by the promises of the enemy and who look forward to the day when the scheming, perfidious Japanese shall have been driven from the Philippines. That day will come."

The text of the President's statement follows:

"On the fourteenth of this month a puppet government was set up on the Philippine Islands with Jose P. Laurel, formerly a justice of the Philippine Supreme Court, as 'president.' Jorge Vargas, formerly a member of the Philippine commonwealth cabinet and Benigno Aquino, also formerly a member of that cabinet, were closely associated with Laurel in this movement.

"Hypocritical Appeal"

"The first act of the new puppet regime was to sign a military alliance with Japan. The second act was a hypocritical appeal for American sympathy which was made in draud and deceit and was designed to confuse and mislead the Filipino people.

"I wish to make it clear that neither the former collaborationist 'Philippine executive commission' nor the present 'Philippine Republic' has the recognition or sympathy of the Government of the United States. No act of either body is now or ever will be considered lawful or binding by this government.

"The only Philippine government is that established by the people of the Philippines under the authorization of the Congress of the United States—the government of the Commonwealth of the Philippine Islands. At my request, the principal executive officers of the Commonwealth were transferred in 1942 from Corregidor to Washington.

To Use All Resources

"Further, it is our expressed policy that all the resources of the United States, both of men and materials, shall be employed to drive the treacherous, invading Japanese from the Philippine Lslands, to restore as quickly as possible orderly and free democratic processes of government in the islands, and to establish there a truly independent Philippine nation.

"Our sympathy goes out to those who remain loyal to the United States and the Commonwealth; to that great majority of the Filipino people who have not been deceived by the promises of the enemy and who look forward to the day when the scheming, perfidious Japanese shall have been driven from the Philippines. That day will come."

increased in relation to tank strength.

(4) A new type of light division "is being tested" for amphibious, airborne, mountain and jungle operations. Its aggregate strength will be much less than that of an infantry division, but its firepower approximately the same in small arms and automatic weapons.

(5) The division's organic defensive weapons, such as tank destroyer battalions and antiaircraft, are being limited, and a pool of antiaircraft artillery and tank destroyer battalions provided under corps or army control to reinforce threatened points.

(6) The corps will be relieved of administrative duties, which will be concentrated at headquarters of the field army, so that the corps becomes purely a tactical and training organization (except when it functions as a "separate" corps, when it is in effect a small army.)

The circular notes also that the number of staff officers, even at Army Headquarters, is being reduced generally "to provide only sufficient personnel for combat needs, since operations cannot be swift and effective if staffs are large and clumsy."

In general, says the circular, the purpose of the reorganization is to secure miximum use of manpower, provide greater flexibility in organization for economy of force and massing of strength at the decisive point, reduce headquarters and other overhead to keep pace with modern transport and communication facilities, and "to provide commanders with the greatest possible amount of offensive power through reduction in passive defensive elements."

Battle Wounds May Offer Clews To New Weapons

Philadelphia, Oct. 22 (AP).—First clews to Axis secret weapons are likely to show in the wounds they inflict.

Military doctors were advised to watch for new types of wounds and to report them promptly, in a paper delivered to the Association of Military Surgeons of the United States here today by Dr. J. F. Fulton, professor of physiology, Yale University Medical School.

In general, burns, tearing effects and a number of other conditions immediately apparent to a skilled doctor are among the tell-tale signs.

If poison gases are used, the injury will show what kind of gas and it may also reveal the introduction of new alkaloid poisons, thus leading quickly to protective measures.

Big British Carrier Aided Pacific Fleet

Participation of a British aircraft carrier with the United States Pacific Fleet in combat operations against the Japanese was disclosed yesterday by the British Admiralty delegation.

The flat-top, the 23,000-ton Victorious, served with a Pacific fleet task force for several months, covering the Coral Seal, southwest and mid-Pacific areas and averaging 9000 miles of sailing monthly.

This is the first time that combat operation of a major British ship in the Pacific theater has been reported since the battleship Prince of Wales and the battle cruiser Repulse were sunk by Japanese planes north of Singapore early last year.

Exchanged Squadrons

The announcement did not say whether the task force with which the Victorious sailed ever actually succeeded in engaging the Japanese, but the enemy-dominated areas in which it operated strongly suggested that the American admiral in charge was out looking for trouble.

At least part of the time the Victorious had an American carrier squadron aboard in exchange for a squadron of Britishers which joined the force of an accompanying American carrier. The announcement made plain that the joint operation, which began early this year, has ended, but did not say where the Victorious has gone.

Test of Tactics

It was also made clear that the principal benefit gained was not any destruction inflicted on the enemy but a practical test of American and British tactics which will be valuable as British ships join the Pacific war in increasing numbers. The Admiralty delegation said:

"Invaluable tactical experience was gained in the course of these operations which will be put to good effect as Britain mobilizes her naval power alongside that of the United States, Australia and New Zealand for full-scale action in the Pacific war against Japan."

The carrier went to the Pacific after being refitted at a United States Atlantic port early this year. Previously she had seen action in the North Sea, Atlantic, Arctic and Mediterranean. Her skipper, Capt. Lachlan D. Mackintosh, reported to the Admiralty that "I cannot speak too highly of the kindness shown us by the United States fleet."

Chinese Battle Jap-Encircling Movement

By the Associated Press

Chingking, Oct. 22.—Outnumbered Chinese forces, clinging to precarious positions west of the Salween River near the Burma border, battled desperately tonight against an encircling movement by Japanese forces officially estimated at 30,000.

The Japanese columns, already tripled in number since the beginning of the Yunnan Province offensive three weeks ago, have received further reinforcements and are also gaining in air support for the first time since the battles flared on the mountainous frontier of southwestern China, tonight's high command communique said.

The Japanese, however, have been unable to show new advances in fighting at two points west of the Salween—at Lichaipah and Chaikungfang—while the enemy force moving northward opposite Luku was being held in the area south of Lusui, where a "furious struggle" was continuing.

The over-all Japanese objective, a Chinese spokesman said today, appears to be an attempt to seal off the Salween as a barrier to Chinese forces which they fear might begin a westward invasion of Japanese-held Burma in conjunctio.. with an eastern Allied drive from India.

He said Japanese reinforcements for the Salween campaign had been drawn from the 75,000 to 100,000 troops the enemy is estimated to have in Burma.

Defense Board to Visit War Plants, Troop Bases

By the Associated Press

Military, naval and air officers on the Inter-American Defense Board leave Washington tomorrow to inspect United States industrial production and military installations.

About 45 representatives from 17 Latin-American countries and the United States will be in the party, which goes first to Fort Knox, Ky. The Seiberling and Goodyear rubber plants at Akron, Ohio, will be visited Tuesday, the Ford Willow Run bomber and Fisher tank plants at Detroit will be inspected Wednesday, and on Thursday the party goes to the Great Lakes Naval Training Station near Chicago.

Allied Planes Wreck Airfield West of Paris

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), Oct. 23.—RAF heavy bombers roared over the south coast of England for more than an hour last night headed toward the continent, indicating they were out on their third big raid of the week, after American Marauder medium bombers wrecked a Nazi airdrome near Paris yesterday.

The Maruader bombers in daylight attacks yesterday struck at an Axis airdrome 45 miles west of Paris to sustain the new cycle of round-the-clock bombing of the continent.

The Americans sped to their target, the airbase of Evreux-Fauville, over approximately 75 miles of Nazi territory and returned to their British bases without encountering a single enemy plane.

This performance, probably the first time in the war that such a sizable operation into an enemy stronghold had been allowed to go utterly unhindered, attested to the depletion of the German air force strength.

The raid came in the midst of an autumn flurry of cross-channel aerial warfare in which the Allies have been landing solid punches while the Germans have been limited to light jabs.

The Nazis made their seventh straight nuisance raid on the London area tonight when a handful of planes set the sirens going soon after blackout in the earliest alarm of many months. Searchlights and guns went into action immediately but a few raiders managed to drop flares and bombs in one urban district and in one suburban area. At least two persons were killed and several were seriously injured.

RAF Typhoon bombers with an escort of Typhoon fighters dived through openings in the clouds over Tricqueville, France, late today, and they also encountered no fighter opposition, although light antiaircraft fire was reported.

RAF Spitfires, besides accompanying the Marauders, carried out a number of sweeps and met increased enemy action, however. They shot down eight Nazi planes for a loss of one Spitfire.

Returning crewmen reported extensive damage done at the Evreux-Fauville airdrome. They left a hangar flaming and numerous fires among other buildings, and also hit runways, dispersal areas and parked enemy aircraft.

All the bombers returned safely, keeping their Marauder losses to 13 in 77 missions.

The remarkable lack of opposition to the Evreux-Fauville attack—it was the Marauders' first flight after two weeks of bad weather over the Continent—did not mean that the German air force is so low that it could not put up any resistance.

The phenomenon was taken to indicate, however, that the German air force, with intensified attacks on more fronts to cope with, is so hard-pressed that the Nazi strategists consider it not worth while to risk precious planes in defense of secondary targets.

War Sidelights

Nazi Workmen See Two Tried for Sabotage

Stockholm, Oct. 22 (AP).—As "a warning and a frightening example," two Berlin workmen were tried recently for sabotage by a special court before their comrades in an electrical goods plant, the newspaper Lokalanzeiger said today.

The newspaper said the fact that the workmen were tried before assembled workers showed the extent to which the German war industry was being sabotaged and the newest Nazi means of combating the danger.

One of the workers was sentenced to four years and the other to three years at hard labor for stealing virtually irreplaceable radio tubes from the factor, which the newspaper identified as probably the Siemens plant.

Addressing a warning to the other workers, the court chairman told them that anyone who stole goods intended for the army was "a national criminal subject to the heaviest punishment, even death."

Corsicans Unforgiving

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Oct. 22 (AP).—Italy may have surrendered, but French Corsicans have not yet accepted the Italians as allies, an American officer returning today from that island said.

More than a dozen women who had been fraternizing with the Italians recently were forced by the infuriated partisans to walk through the streets naked, he said. The officer brought back photographs of the women being stripped.

Bonus for 'Supermen'

London, Oct. 22 (AP).—Germany's once-vaunted superarmy is now being offered special inducements to face the "dangers and hardships of frontline fighting.

The Berlin radio said today that the high command has offered bonuses for "deterioration in conditions of living and cases in which soldiers become necessarily involved in the enemy's vicinity."

Bonuses also will be paid for "repeated nights spent in open trenches and in cases of irregular or insufficient food supplies."

more plane until they get up to five per day.

"And then," Kaiser added, "we can make 10 pe. day if you want them." This month the plant will have produced 43 Corsairs, Kaiser told the committee. He added that one Corsair could lick 50 Zeros in successive dogfights, according to his information. His judgment, he said, was based upon knowledge of the relative merits of the U. S. Navy and the Jap fighters.

Under committee questioning Kaiser said that neither he nor his son, Henry Kaiser, jr., who is assisting him, is taking any sort of compensation for the Brewster job, undertaken at the direct request of the Navy Department.

"I propose to get out production for the United States of America," Kaiser said, adding that he planned to stay with the job until it was successful. He said that not only did he receive no compensation, but that he had no option on stock, "will not take any, will not have anything to do with purchasing any." He revealed that up to this time he had spent $25,000 of his own funds on the Brewster job and probably would spend $100,000 before he got through. He added, "That is of no importance."

Kaiser flatly refused to attribute all Brewster difficulties to labor, placing himself in complete accord with Rear Admiral S. M. Kraus of the Third Naval District, who testified early in the hearings.

"The same thing that was wrong at Brewster is wrong in about half the aircraft plants in the country," Kaiser insisted.

"Take a look at the scoreboard of Brewster, eighteenth position out of 27. What is wrong is in frequent change of management, forced by a fundamentally wrong policy, the policy of selling more important that the policy of production; the rapid mushroom growth of the purchasing department; the mushroom growth of the accounting department; the mushroom growth of the production control department; the rapid growth of the engineering department, improperly financed." Under questioning, he added labor troubles to the list.

Assured of Labor Cooperation

On the labor front, Kaiser stood squarely on his record as an employer of nearly one-quarter of a million men in enterprises ranging from the building of Liberty ships, troopships, hospital ships and the like, through operating the largest cement plant in the world, two magnesium plants, another aircraft factory, to working on secret projects for Army Ordnance and the Chemical Warfare Service, and nearly a dozen other enterprises.

Kaiser told the committee he had the assurance of "wholehearted and effective cooperation" from Tom De Lorenzo, president of local 365 in producing planes, and added, "I am personally confident that the workers of Brewster are eager to produce, and I accepted as the function of management to provide them with the plans and the means for effective production under conditions that create mutual confidence and happiness and pride of achievement."

Pleads for Women in Industry

Calling on the committee to give its wholehearted support to Brewster and the workers at Brewster in order to produce the Navy's planes, Kaiser issued a strong plea for greater consideration of women in industry.

The problem of women in production needs the attention of Cingress, the West Coast shipbuilder insisted. He pointed out that men go into the Army, industry is left with from 40 to 60 per cent women in many departments, which presents new problems.

"Women need more attention," he said, "and more care than has ever been provided in plants, in order that they may want to work, in order that they should work, in order that they may have happiness in the work and that conditions may be right. It isn't properly provided now. This manpower situation could be tremendously improved, instantly, if we could have child-care and proper shopping centers and some amusement. Women can't work 10 hours a day under abominable conditions. You must give them some consideration; you must do these things for them, and they must have recreation. It is a new situation which we all have a great responsibility to solve."

Asks Plant Scoreboards

Kaiser also asked that Congress force management and the War Production Board to post scoreboards in all plants showing comparable records of man-hours in all industries, proving the comparative efficiency of other competitors of a comparable tank, gun, ship or plane.

"There is no incentive like the pride of achievement," he declared, "to management and to labor also."

The shipbuilder said, he believed in incentive pride, not incentive pay. He said incentive pay is "a good device for raising wages against your competitors," but asserted that such a program would undermine the stabilization program of the country.

Labor relations, Kaiser told the committee, are really only human relations, as complex as family relations, on a much larger scale. He challenged committee members' references to him as a labor appeaser, and said he had been called many names, but never an appeaser.

Congress, he said, is responsible for any labor difficulties the country faces.

"I feel," he said that in the 1930's Congress was faced with an unbearable situation. For instance, labor and management were found fighting with each other, with management taking undue advantage of labor.

Asks Change in Wagner Act

"Congress proceeded immediately to take away all the guns and ammunition from management and give them to labor. To management, Congress in effect said, 'You may have no support; you have all the responsibility. Don't even smile at labor, or you will be a labor appeaser.'

"And to labor it said, 'Management has been tough with you long enough. Here are all the guns and the ammunition you want; no responsibility, no secret balloting, no financial accounting. . . . Don't be afraid of management. We won't even allow them to talk to you for fear they might coerce you, and if management fails to produce we will investigate them."

Kaiser asked Congress to change the Wagner Act so that in case of a dispute management would be permitted to talk to its employes to convince them of "their best economic welfare." Referring to the Supreme Court decision of last Monday, which so interpreted the act, Kaiser said the Supreme Court might change its mind in another case and that the matter should be written into law. He also told Chairman Drewry (Democrat) of Virginia that he was in favor of giving management the right to hire and fire—a right not in the old Brewster contract.

Questioned About Guards

Representative Hebert (Democrat) of Louisiana questioned Kaiser at length concerning the rehiring of four guards at Johnsville in the production force after they had been discharged from the Coast Guard Reserve (temporary) subsequent to a strike at the plant in August.

Hebert asked if Kaiser's rehiring of the men was not appeasement.

"I am going clear through to the top of the Coast Guard with the guard situation," Kaiser said. Asserting his action was not appeasement, he declared he would not have the Coast Guard in the plant guard picture at all, but have the guards responsible to management.

"The problem of those guards is dubious," the industrialist said firmly, "because the Navy promised the union that membership in the Coast Guard would not affect the guards status in the union."

Discussion of the guard situation brought up once again the much-discussed question of the old labor contract with Local 365, CIO United Automobile Workers, which prevented discipling workers or firing them without the consent of the union.

Kaiser told the committee that the contract was now in the hands of the War Labor Board and he believed he would be able to show the contract passed on by the board to the committee in about a week. Members were anxious to learn whether restrictive clauses of which other witnesses had complained had been changed. The industrialist reminded members that both union and management had presented their desires to the WLB, and said:

"I don't determine this contract. Congress has appointed a duly authorized, constituted authority, the War Labor Board. I am putting it in their lap." Hebert interjected the comment that the President created WLB by executive order and the Congress made it "legitimate" by passage of the Smith-Connally Act.

no greater planned displacement than the 45,000-ton American battleships, Iowa and New Jersey, there seems no doubt but that they will have greater length and beam than the two dreadnaughts and hence can be said to be the largest known warships in the world.

Battleships, with their great armor-plate and main batteries, are more compactly built than carriers. The 45,000-ton Iowa, for example, is 880 feet long, while the 27,000-ton Essex is 888 feet overall, according to published figures. The flight deck of the new super carriers should run well over 1000 feet, ship designers believe.

Naval men emphasized that the new craft are designed to be much better aircraft carriers in every way, capable of exploiting more fully the advantages of these "floating air bases," and are not simply a means of lengthening the range of bombers.

Asked about the need for the new carriers, Knox replied:

"They are generally in response to the steady growth in the size of planes. All planes are getting bigger. The craft will have greater protection, both armor-plate and armament.

"They will have greater speed and be able to handle more planes. . . . They are designed to take a lot of punishment. Because of greater compartmentation below decks, the new type will have more protection against underwater blows."

The new supercarriers will be much larger than any existing carriers. Largest known flattop is our Saratoga, which, like its sister ship, the sunken Lexington, displaced 33,000 tons and carried 83 planes. Our smaller Essex type is believed to carry more aircraft.

Largest British type displaces 23,000 tons, while the two biggest Jap carriers, the 26,900-ton Akagi and Kaga, were sunk in the Battle of Midway. They carried about 60 planes. Germany's Graf Zeppelin is only 19,000 tons, and is said to operate 40 planes.

Two of the new American carriers will be built at the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co., Newport News, Va., and the other at the Brooklyn (N. Y.) Navy Yard.

Three of the Navy's prewar carrier force are still afloat, while 17 regular flat tops have been launched since Pearl Harbor.

Senators to Probe Army Surplus Sale

Truman Group to Sift Charge of Waste In Disposing of Materials in Arkansas

By the Associated Press

Senator McClellan (Democrat) of Arkansas said last night that the Truman Investigating Committee had undertaken an investigation of alleged waste in disposing of surplus construction materials at the Pine Bluff (Ark.) Army arsenal.

The committee's senior investigator, Russell A. Searl, will leave for Arkansas Sunday night to look into published charges that materials acquired from the arsenal as "scrap" were being sold at nearly 500 per cent gross profit.

Earlier, Senator Caraway (Democrat) of Arkansas said she was requesting the War Department to make an investigation of the waste charges, as reported in the Arkansas Gazette, Little Rock.

"If the information contained in the newspaper article was at all correct, those responsible for this condition are guilty of criminal waste and neglect of duty and they should be immediately dismissed from their positions and appropriate action should be taken by the Department of Justice," McClellan commented.

Senator Caraway cited published reports in the Arkansas Gazette that a Pine Bluff junk dealer had been able to acquire quantities of "kegs of nails, unused metal window frames, electrically controlled steam traps and 20-foot lengths of 3-inch pipe as scrap metal."

The dealer, she quoted the paper as saying, "frankly admitted he didn't know why the Government permitted him to buy" the material "for a song."

Admittedly worried about the effect on business when the Government disposes of its surplus equipment after the war, the House Small Business Committee called Admiral Emory S. Land yesterday to explain what can be done with excess Maritime Commission property.

"The committee is terribly concerned over this disposal of surplus goods problem," said Committeeman Ploeser (Republican) of Missouri. "The Army already is dumping some of the surplus onto the markets. Reports are being investigated that $1,400,000 worth of machine tools were sold for $76,000. Such things as that will wreck all of our markets."

Admiral Land told the committee that the United States, now turning out merchant vessels at the rate of six a day, will have an "ace in the hole" when the time comes to write a peace treaty.

At the end of the war, he said, Uncle Sam's rapidly expanding fleet of merchant ships will play a major role in rushing shipments in international trade.

Any legislation passed by Congress for disposal of surplus property should not handicap the Maritime Commission in continuing its activities or in carrying out possible future international agreements, he said.

Land suggested that a joint House-Senate committee determine the policies for the disposition of surplus property and appoint a man to carry out those policies.

Legislation to expedite the return to private ownership of a large number of vessels bought or requisitioned for war service was approved yesterday by the House Merchant Marine Committee.

The bill would authorize the return of Great Lakes vessels and other vessels of 1000 gross tons or less, of which, the War Shipping Administration reported, large numbers have been acquired.

"Craft especially designed for the work in which these vessels have been engaged are being produced in increasing volume," Admiral Land reported, "wherefore it is anticipated that a substantial number of these vessels can be released without interfering with the war effort."

Under the terms of the bill, upon determination by the Government agency having control of the vessel that it is no longer needed, the original owner would be given first opportunity to buy the vessel back at the price he received for it, adjusted to restore it to its original condition and utility.

Decorations Won by Two D. C. Officers

Two Washington officers have been decorated by Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, the Navy Department announced yesterday.

Lieut. Harry Eades Woodworth, 716 Allison st. nw., received the Gold Star in lieu of a second Silver Star Medal, and Comdr. Lawrence Emerson Tull, formerly of 619 Quincy st. nw., was awarded the Legion of Merit.

WOODWORTH

Lieutenant Woodworth, who was previously decorated by the Army as a member of the crew of a submarine which brought gold, silver, and securities out of the Philippines shortly after the United States entered the war, was cited for intrepidity in action as gunnery officer of a submarine during a successful surface engagement with an enemy ship.

In the face of intense machine-gun fire, Lieut. Woodward removed a projectile jammed in the bore of a deck gun, enabling the gunner to maintain the rate of fire, and remained at his station performing the duties of gun captain, first loader, and sight-setter until the enemy ship was destroyed.

Lieut. Woodworth, 27, a graduate of the Naval Academy in the class of 1938, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Woodworth of Spokane, Wash. His wife is the former Catharine Maier, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Maier, live at the Allison st. address.

Commander Tull, 49, was cited for outstanding service as commanding officer of a construction battalion during the installation of an airdrome in the South Pacific area, which was completed despite heavy enemy bombings.

Formerly a construction engineer for the Public Buildings Administration, Commander Tull entered the Navy in June, 1942.

Connally Offers Peace Plan As Forward Step, No Panacea

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Chairman Tom Connally of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday recommended the Connally peace resolution to the Senate as a "forward step" significant of an "advanced and responsible attitude toward foreign relationships."

Conally plainly told the Senate in a printed report that the resolution offers no world panacea. "It is realized by the committee that it is impossible at this time to blueprint a plan for curing all the ills of the world."

The report promptly touched off a sample of the debate the resolution will receive in the Senate next week, when a bi-partisan group of Senators will take the floor to damand "strengthening and clarifying" changes.

Sees No Light Shed

Senator Hatch (Democrat) of New Mexico, one of the four sponsors of the so-called "B-2 H-2" plan to commit this Government to an international organization "with power, including military force," to suppress aggression and keep the peace, said the report "throws no light whatever on what the resolution means."

Following a series of organization conferences between Senators supporting "B-2 H-2" amendments, Hatch said they would demand during Senate debate an interpretation of some of the language in the compromise resolution.

The Connally resolution calls on the United States to join with free and sovereign nations in the establishment and maintenance of "international authority with power to prevent aggression and to preserve the peace of the world."

Would Remove Doubt

Hatch said the Ball-Burton-Hatch-Hill group wants definitions of the words "authority" and "power" for the Senate record so there will be no doubt of the Senate's intent in postwar years.

Other leaders of the group, including Senators Ball of Minnesota, and Burton of Ohio (Republicans), and Hill (Democrat) of Alabama, have charged the language is so broad it can mean one thing to isolationists and another thing to internationalists.

Fight Appears Hopeless

While the group will demand "full debate," their fight appeared hopeless. A majority of the Senate already is on record in informal polls for the compromise, and leaders claim the vote will be "practically unanimous" on the final roll call. They privately contend more punch is contained in the word "power" than appears on the surface.

Leadership strategy will be to make few and short speeches, leading off with one Monday by Connally. This will throw practically the entire burden of debate on "B-2 H-2" Senators and those joining with them. Senator Pepper (Democrat) of Florida may lead off the fight for the bipartisan group, in a speech introducing its amendments.

Parts of 12 Resolution

Connally's formal report to the Senate yesterday listed 12 separate peace resolutions considered by the committee, and said the committee draft embodies the peace objectives of all of them and will "contribute materially" to their general goal.

"In reporting this resolution, your committee kept in mind the overwhelming fact of the situation—the fact that complete victory is yet to be won," said the Connally report.

"It seemed proper to reaffirm on behalf of the Senate of the United States the Nation's determination to wage war until such victory is actually achieved. Just as we fight the war in close cooperation with our comrades-in-arms, so do we contemplate that we shall also cooperate with them in securing a just and honorable peace. Finally, the resolution comprehends the establishment of international authority to prevent aggression and preserve the peace of the world."

Long an Adviser

Feis Resigns Post at State Department

The State Department announced late yesterday the resignation of Dr. Herbert Feis, its longtime adviser on international economic affairs.

The 50-year-old Feis, a native New Yorker, assumed his post with the department in 1931, two years before President Roosevelt's election.

He was educated at Harvard University and subsequently served on the faculties of the University of Kansas and the University of Cincinnati.

During his 12 years with the State Department he participated in numerous conferences abroad.

Feis' resignation was announced in a brief statement, which said he had "filled his post with great distinction since 1931."

"He was prevailed upon to remain in office until certain important work had been completed," declared the statement.

"His resignation has now been accepted with sincere regret in view of the many important services which he has rendered during the past 12 years."

Japs Acknowledge Loss of Salamaua

'Smut-Hunter' Sees No Threat To Nation's Morals in Esquire

By Howard Dobson
Associated Press Staff Writer

A man who said his professional duties include attending five or six burlesque shows a week, and studying 60 to 70 magazines a month in search of published smut, declared yesterday he does not consider Esquire magazine dangerous to the Nation's morals.

Louis J. Croteau of Burlington, Mass., secretary of the New England Watch and Ward Society, which he said is often called "the watchdog of New England's morals," told a Postoffice Department hearing board that he examines Esquire regularly.

Asked about the famed Varga girl drawings, Croteau observed, "after profound consideration of the subject, I didn't find anything bordering on the indecent or in any way lewd."

Many More Indecent

Of the magazine as a whole, he commented, "I have found in many other popular, respectable magazines numerous articles and other matter much more indecent than I ever found in any issue of Esquire."

Croteau, who has headed the 65-year-old social service group for two years, was a witness for Esquire at a hearing to determine whether its second-class mailing privileges shall be revoked.

As secretary of the society, Croteau explained, he censors books, magazines, movies and stage shows, usually seeing at least one burlesque show every night. The magazines he inspects regularly, he added, are largely "of the spicy pulp variety" and in his opinion the detective story magazines are "the worst of all."

Sex Entire Basis

Greek mythology, Shakespeare and the novels of Charles Dickens entered the hearing on the side of Esquire earlier in the day during the testimony of Herbert W. Smith, principal of a private day school (Frances W. Parker) in Chicago and a former Harvard English professor.

Board Chairman Walter Myers, Fourth Assistant Postmaster General, asked Smith to recall certain Greek myths, several Shakespearean plays and any of Dickens' novels.

"Is not sex the basis of all of them?" he asked.

'Sahara', at the Earle, Is Grim But Gripping Drama

"SAHARA." Columbia picturization of a story by Philip MacDonald, based on an incident in the Soviet photoplay, "The Thirteen," starring Humphrey Bogart, with Bruce Bennett, Lloyd Bridges, Rex Ingram, J. Carroll Naish, Dan Duryea, Richard Nugent, Patrick O'Moore, Louis T. Mercier, Carl Harbord, Guy Kingsford, Kurt Krueger, John Wengraf and Hans Schumm. Directed by Zoltan Korda. At the Earle Theater.

"SAHARA," Columbia's new screen feature at the Earle Theater, would be almost too grim and grizzly for comfort were it not lightened by frequent comedy espisodes and softened by warm human touches that make it one of the best-balanced of the starker war pictures.

It bears a close kinship to "The Lost Patrol"—to hark back as far as 1934—and among the more recent films springing out of the present conflict bears a close relationship to "Bataan" and the final scenes of "The Eve of St. Mark" in its reflection of the spirit and heroism of the forces fighting on the side of the United Nations.

The cast is all-male and the locale unremittingly the barren wastes of the African desert, torn by violent gunfire and parched by a waterless sun.

Yet against this bleak and terrifying background, Philip MacDonald has spread a story, based on an incident in a Soviet photoplay, "The Thirteen," that by turns is tortured, compassionate, thrilling and always of engrossing interest.

The story of this vivid drama is dedicated less to individual glorification than to emphasis on the valor of the British, French Sudanese and Italian fighting men, rescued from sure death on the desert by an American tank attempting to make its way back to its command under a hard-boiled sergeant with deep convictions of duty. The development of the action centers in control of a well in a battered desert ruin—the only water supply for hundreds of miles around. The well and "Lulubelle," the tank, are as much heroes of the play as the human actors who make it a living symbol of the bitter hardships of modern war. The battle scenes are realistic and exciting and the whole thing adds up to a splendid job of tense, suspenseful and nerve-wracking picture-making.

Drama Bristles With Fine Performances

In the role of Sergt. Joe Gunn, Humphrey Bogart has a part that suits him down to the ground, despite its emancipation from even the faintest suggestion of "villain" or "bad man." The excellence of his performance is matched by more than one other in the cast. Bruce Bennett, for example, turns in a conspicuously effective portrayal of "Waco" Hoyt; Rex Ingram is superb as Tambul, the self-effacing Sudanese; Richard Nugent a splendid British Captain Halliday and Louis T. Mercier perfectly assigned as the Frenchman with a sense of humor as well as duty. As Tambul's Italian captive, J. Carroll Naish offers another of his incomparable characer impersopations and the Nazi officers are efficiently limned by Kurt Krueger and John Wengraf. Dan Duryea, Lloyd Bridges, Patrick O'Moore, Carl Harbord and Guy Kingsford are among others who contribute generously to the uniform merit of a film that commands both attention and respect.

For the stage portion of the new bill, Managing Director Harry Anger has churned up another brief interval of tip-top diversion, coheadlined by two acts long familiar to the Capital and always liked. The one is supplied by Lathrop and Lee—the remaining two-thirds of the trio formerly billed as the Lathrop Brothers and Lee—who have "taken tap-dancing to Park Avenue" and seem better than ever on each recurrent local appearance; the other, by the Three Swifts, head and shoulders above all the other Indian club jugglers. The bill is opened by Eileen Ritter in a dancing bit in which she accompanies herself on a three-and-a-half octave piano—a neat conceit Mr. Anger no doubt remembers from Clara Morton, the soubret of the Four Mortons, Sam, Kitty, Clara and Paul, who shared topline distinction with the Four Cohans, Cressy and Dayne, Moore and Littlefield and the other mainstays of the two-a-day heyday of vaudeville. The rollicking Roxyettes, as usual, are in and out to the great benefit of the bill.

The Government's omnipresent "Suggestion Box," a slightly far-fetched color cartoon comedy, "Fin 'n' Catty," another fable of a cat and a goldfish, and an especially timely newsreel round out a particularly sturdy entertainment.

In the Heroic Story of the 'Lulubelle'

HUMPHREY BOGART
center, as the hard-fibered sergeant in Columbia's production of "Sahara," a story of bitter warfare in North Africa, which yesterday opened its first Washington engagement on the screen at the Earle Theater. Russian Documentary Heads Worthy Double Bill at Met.

By Marjorie Kelly.

"ADVENTURES OF A ROOKIE." RKO-Radio comedy starring Wally Brown and Alan Carney, with Richard Martin, Erford Gage, Margaret Landry, Patti Brill, Rita Corday, Robert Anderson, John Hamilton, Ruth Lee, Lorraine Krueger, Ercelle Woods, Toddy Peterson and Byron Folger. Directed by Leslie Goodwins. At the Metropolitan Theater.

A sharply contrasting bill opened yesterday morning at the Metropolitan Theater—the Russian documentary, "The City That Stopped Hitler—Heroic Stalingrad," and "Adventures of a Rookie," one of the more pleasantly foolish of recent Hollywood products.

"The City That Stopped Hitler" is the record made at the cost of many cameramen's lives of the defense of Stalingrad and of the offensive action which after many months of siege defeated the Germans and forced the surrender of the remnant of Hitler's forces still surviving.

It is an inspiring record. Opening with glimpses of the beautiful city on the Volga before the German offensive began, it shows the fierce resistance which never relaxed during the months of siege, even when the buildings of the city were pounded to rubble, and the major part of the city was in the enemy's hands.

House-to-house fighting is recorded; we see the sniper Tchekov getting his fortieth and forty-first Nazi; see German snipers picking off Russians who were storming their positions. And then the camera picks up briefly the simple funeral of one of these, and the narrator repeats the words of his comrade: "Since you cannot do any more, I will fight for both."

Sing Their Way to Front

Very impressive is a shot of infantry and cavalry singing jubilantly as they cross snowy terrain, on their way to the first offensive against the enemy after the months of defense, and happy about it.

There are shots of the secret rocket gun, affectionately known as "Katusha," blazing away at the enemy. You never see "Katusha;" actually what you see is what the enemy must have seen—the great rockets roaring out of a cloud of smoke—and it is not a sight to make you envy the Germans.

In a recaptured village the camera records with merciless detail the story of abuse of Russian prisoners as it is mutely told by the ravaged corpses of starved and mistreated men. Later in the film the memory of these things is quietly emphasized by the snarling hate on faces of Russians in charge of German prisoners, as they reluctantly obey the order not to hurt their charges.

New Comedy Team

The other half of the bill "Adventures of a Rookie," costars Alan Carney and Wally Brown for the first time, and the teaming is highly successful. Carney does a couple of his impersonations, and Brown makes use, every time he gets involved with his sergeant, of the trick he used in vaudeville—monologues in which no sentence is ever completed.

Richard Martin, an attractive youngster, of whom RKO has been making good use in many of their recent films, is in this one and seems to improve with each picture.

The film is surprisingly free from "B" picture cliches, and its amiable idiocy comes off well. The director, who deserves much credit for what he has done with a script that basically is not very funny, is Leslie Goodwins.

LEONARD LYONS

Broadway Glossary

New York, Oct. 22.

QUERY: Quentin Reynolds, the war correspondent whose new radio series made its debut Tuesday, returned from Moscow by way of Sicily and Salerno. In Sicily he had a reunion with General Montgomery . . . "Where were you, before you went to Moscow?" Montgomery asked him . . . "Home, in New York," said Reynolds . . . "Then tell me," asked General Montgomery, drawing some sandpatterns with his toe, "is it true that the girls in New York are wearing berets like mine?"

MARLENE DIETRICH

COMPLAINT: Jarmila Novotna, of the Metropolitan Opera, has just returned from a five-month concert tour of South America. When she arrived in Buenos Aires, to open the season there, she started making some phone calls, but couldn't get the hotel operator. When someone finally answered Miss Novotna's ringing, there was further delay. She demanded to speak to the hotel manager, and complained bitterly to him about such inexcusable service . . . "I'm sorry, madame, if you were inconvenienced," apologized the manager, on this, the last evening of Castillo's reign as president, "but we've had a little revolution today."

SWANK: Woolworth Donohue's companion, Clemente Ballin, who for more than a year kept his vow to stay away from Manhattan, finally left his country hermitage last week, and appeared in town. "I had to come in for the wedding, where I was best man," Ballin explained. "Y'know, the Donohue-Whitney wedding" . . . "Which one?" he was asked. "Did a Donohue marry a Whitney last week?" . . . "Well, not quite," Ballin reported. "I was best man at the wedding of Woolworth Donohue's butler and Joan Whitney Payson's maid."

TEST: Mary Martin, who won rave notices for her performance in "One Touch of Venus," was not the first star considered for the role. Marlene Dietrich was proposed for the part, and when she was in New York, she was asked whether she'd mind auditioning in a theater. At midnight they entered the empty Broadhurst, and Kurt Weill accompanied her on the piano. The radiators started hissing and banging, but Miss Dietrich sang. From the rear of the orchestra came a shout: "Can't hear you back here." The film star sang louder, and the din of the radiators increased. From the top of the balcony came another warning: "Can't hear you up here." . . . "Let's try it tomorrow," Miss Dietrich decided. "I can't stand hissing, even from radiators."

CHATTER: Commander McAfee of the WAVES will be promoted to Captain, which will give her rank equal to Colonel Hobby of the WACs . . . Booth Tarkington has given Mort Lewis the radio rights to his "Little Orvie." Skippy Homeier, who plays one of the leading roles in "Tomorrow the World," will be starred in this radio series . . . The syndicates are bidding for "Sad Sack," the comic strip in "Yank." Sergt. George Baker, who draws the strip, hasn't sold the postwar rights as yet . . . Xavier Cugat will bring his augmented orchestra back to New York in December, to receive further official Latin-American decorations for his music accomplishments . . . Karyl Norman, the "Creole Fashion Plate," is preparing a comeback with an impersonation of Lena Horne.

FAITH: Sam Goldwyn showed his new film about the Russian War, "North Star," to Darryl Zanuck. When the showing was over, Zanuck congratulated him and said: "It's a hit, and I'm sure you'll make a lot of money out of it" . . . "I don't care whether it makes any money," Goldwyn replied. "I produced this story because I believe in it. Yes, I don't care whether it makes any money. All I want is for 130 million people to see it."

PROPAGANDA: Some OWI reporters allege that at last Dr. Goebbels is offering what he considers irrefutable proof that Americans have no respect for religion, and have embarked upon a cruel campaign of terror against the men of God. "While we Nazis are protecting the Vatican," Goebbels broadcast, "look what's happening in so-called civilized America." And Goebbels offered his proof, for reproduction in the local newspapers, the two-week-old headlines from Yankee Stadium and St. Louis "YANKS WHIP CARDINALS."

HEDDA HOPPER

Opera Star to Become Film Actor

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 22.—John Brownlee, Metropolitan Opera baritone, Australian born, gets a test opposite Rosalind Russell for the role of Dr. McDonald, the man who helped Nurse Elizabeth Kenny start her life's work. It would be funny having an opera star step into an acting role as important as this. His favorite song is "Waltzing Matilda," Australian folk song, which runs all through "Sister Kenny" . . . Barry Sullivan, instead of Brian Donlevy, plays opposite Betty Hutton in "Incendiary Blonde." George Marshall takes them to Tucson, Ariz., for a week's shooting in November. While Betty will sing many of Texas Guinan's old songs, George hopes for another new one as good as "Jingle Jangle Jingle," which he introduced in a picture . . . Ran into Walter Slezak at Paramount. He was discussing two parts. They wanted him for Goering in "The Hitler Gang." Says he, "If I continue playing nasty Nazis, my career will end when the war does." So he chose to play with Ray Milland in "Tomorrow's Harvest."

ROSALIND RUSSELL

Holds Record

Jane Withers, at 17, is starting her forty-first starring role. During adolescence she never stopped. Only other one who did that was Jackie Cooper . . . Joan Davis calls her autobiography "Si and I." . . . Can you beat the luck of Dorothy Lamour? Her handsome husband cooks, too . . . After Richard Waring made his debut as Bette Davis' brother in "Mr. Skeffington," she handed him a horseshoe with a card reading "Success." Helen Forrest leaving Harry James' orchestra for a singing career of her own . . . Two months ago I wrote that I'd heard a singer, 20-year-old miss, Marion Bell, whose voice and face matched her name, and asked you to put her name down in your memory book—you'd be hearing it often in years to come. Well, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has just signed her on a long term contract.

Mary Pickford is trying to get Dorothy Gish to adopt a child. She thinks all women should have one. Dorothy leaves for New York and mother next week. Says "We have such good times together, when Lillian and I started acting mother warned us, 'You can read stories printed about you, but don't believe them; never forget some press agent was paid to write 'em. Let's establish now our way of living with money you're making, and we'll never have to change.'" They never have. The Gishes could help newcomers a great deal by writing an essay on their mother's advice.

It's in the Bag

First thing Bing Crosby asked on the set of "Going My Way" was, "Hedda, have you seen Mr. Flabby yet?"—meaning Bob Hope. "No, but I hear he's writing a book about his experiences overseas." Bing came back with, "If he does, I don't think I'll let him in my next picture. As a matter of fact, I don't think I'll let him anyway. It's becoming increasingly difficult to imagine Bob ever getting the girl." And with a twinkle, he started rehearsing the end of the picture with Leo McCarey. They haven't talked much about "Going My Way," but from what I saw it's the most timely thing being produced in Hollywood today. It concerns wayward boys and the church's and society's duty to those boys. The lesson is put over by precept and entertainment—not preachment.

"Father Fitzgerald"

There was "Father" Barry Fitzgerald talking about "Father" Bing after he'd sung "Adeste Fidelis" and said goodby before going on to another parish. Barry was saying he was always thinking of others, and life can be so beautiful when you do that, and at that moment he looked up and saw his own mother walking toward him. Bing had arranged for her passage from Ireland without telling him. Then the choir boys, who might have been gangsters, started singing "Too-Ra—Loo-Ra-Loo-Ra'—an Irish lullaby. Leo chose Adeline Reynolds, who started her screen career three years ago at the age of 80, as the mother. During her first rehearsal there wasn't a dry eye on that set. In fact, there was a reverence about the whole thing. I heard a priest mutter, "When the archbishop sees Fitzgerald's performance he'll probably give him a parish of his own."

So There

Monty Woolley, the beard, is bored being called British. Not that he doesn't admire British actors, but says he, "You'd think that no American ever spoke our language properly!" He'd have you know his great-grandfather fought the British in the Revolutionary War, his grandfather fought in the Civil War, and he's ready to fight anybody who calls him a British actor. He's as American as ham and eggs, and doesn't want you to forget it . . . Akim Tamiroff's wife in "Dragon Seed" will be Jacqueline De Witt.

Change for Abel

Walter Abel, famous for comedy roles, plays a serious dramatic part as a chaplain on Bataan in Paramount's "So Proudly We Hail,' starring Claudette Colbert, Paulette Goddard and Veronica Lake.

Rail Strike Status Seen As Critical

Leaders of the five operating railroad brotherhoods last night prepared to authorize a strike vote among 350,000 railroad workers at a meeting in Chicago today, it was learned authoritatively.

A high Government official described the railroad labor situation as extremely critical last night, with four of the five unions voting to reject a proposed 4 cents an hour wage increase recommended by an emergency board.

A meeting of all five unions to act on a strike resolution is scheduled for today, a qualified spokesman revealed to the Associated Press. Action was postponed until today because one union, the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, failed to conclude separate deliberations until late yesterday. The unions originally demanded a 30 per cent increase.

Meanwhile, it was understood that representatives of 15 nonoperating unions meeting in Washington expect to announce by Tuesday a decision to hold a strike poll of 1,100,000 railroad workers affiliated with their unions.

Although overwhelming majorities in favor of strike action are expected from both union groups, it was understood that a strike would not necessarily occur.

Might Set Strike Date

It was regarded as likely that the strike vote would authorize union leaders to set a strike date, thus providing an additional breathing space for more bargaining with the administration on wages. It is understood that a strike referendum might take 30 days.

A. F. Witney, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, declared in an address to his union chiefs that labor's no-strike pledge was becoming "more and more untenable."

He charged nearly all key governmental positions were held by "big business reactionaries" and "ultraconservative" men appointed by President Roosevelt, and maintained they were entrenched as strongly as "in the days of Coolidge and Hoover."

In Control of Congress

"Why has the President permitted this to happen?" he added. "Because the Southern Democrats, in collusion with Northern Wall Street Republicans, have gotten control of Congress. This clique is out to murder the labor movement and rob the common people. The President has been appeasing it with appointments to hold the solid South in line for the 1944 elections.

"President Roosevelt has had his Munich with Congress and there is going to be no effective stabilization. The stabilization program is vulnerable. The time is imminent when labor must make or break it."

It was explained that the critical nature of the present situation arises out of the fact that the traditional "cooling off" procedures set up under the Railway Labor Act already have been exhausted.

Where in peacetime, strike ballot action normally precedes the appointment of an emergency board to make recommendations to settle the dispute, since May, 1942, a presidential executive order has set aside the peacetime railway labor machinery to authorize the setting up of an emergency board without requiring the workers to take a strike vote.

This was done, because a strike ballot in wartime was regarded as inconsistent with labor's "no strike" pledge.

In Protest of Decisions

In the current case, however, the two railroad groups would be taking strike ballots in protest against decisions of two emergency boards. Considerable confusion shrouds the proper course of action to take in the event of an affirmative strike vote.

The railroad unions insist that the procedures of the Railway Labor Act have been exhausted, leaving them free to strike.

However, one Government official stated that the National (Railway) Mediation Board would be compelled under the law to certify the dispute to the President as an emergency—thus leaving the President the alternative of appointing new emergency boards or settling the disputes himself.

The nonoperating unions are aroused because of Economic Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson's rejection of an 8-cents-an-hour wage increase recommended by an emergency board. Since then the President has set up a second board to review the case, but the unions challenge the board's legality under the rail labor law.

The railroad unions have been specifically exempted from the Connally-Smith antistrike law.

Live Cattle to Be Brought Under Price Control

As another peg for holding down wartime food prices, the Office of Economic Stabilization is expected to announce next week a price ceiling on live beef cattle, thus dissolving the major food pricing controversy still existing between the Office of Price Administration and the War Food Administration.

OPA has long advocated the ceiling as neeessary to its control of prices on beef and OES Director Fred M. Vinson is said to have agreed to a price of around $16 per hundredweight, despite WFA objections based on the argument "nobody can tell what sort of beef a live animal is going to make."

One of the difficulties under which OPA has had to operate has been the opposition—very strong in Congress—to price ceilings at the farmer level.

The decision to bring live animals under price control is seen as additional proof the Administration indends to stop the leaks in the OPA pricing system as well as push for subsidies as a protection to consumers.

Meantime, the world food situation was highlighted yesterday by Mordecai Fzekiel, economic adviser to the Secretary of Agriculture, who declared food shortages in Germany could not be counted on as a decisive factor in this war as in the last.

The Germans' diet today is 90 per cent of normal in calories and proteins, although down one-half in fats and meats, and fresh vegetable consumption is more than 50 per cent larger than in the pre-war years, Ezekiel told the annual conference on agricultural outlook held at the Department of Agriculture.

Every advance of the Allied armies in Eurpoe is increasing the relief problem for the United Nations, but only liberation of the Balkans and the Danube Basin would bring to Germany a food scarcity that "might again become a major weakening factor," he said.

Russia, on the other hand, has a civilian population that has been living for two years on rations 20 to 40 per cent below normal despite strenuous "efforts to increase crop and livestock production in Siberia and the partially arid areas in southeastern Russia."

The great Russian victories of 1943 have intensified the food problem of the Allies, Ezekiel pointed out, because they have liberated many millions of persons who now have to be fed while the land recaptured can produce little food until the 1944 harvest.

While lend-lease foods have been of great aid to the Russian soldier they have been "only a drop in the bucket" of total needs, he declared—bringing into prominence one of the many huge problems which will be before the first meeting of the Relief and Rehabilitation in Atlantic City in early November.

Ezekiel pointed out the amount of foodstuffs available for export in some United Nations is in excess of the shipping now available to move it—but makes it clear abundant shipping facilities would find the Allies with a tremendous problem of supplies on their hands.

The basic carbohydrates, wheat and sugar, are available in big quantities but the meat needs of countries now under the Nazi heel can be met, Ezekiel indicated, only if the exporting nations—such as the United States, Canada, and Australia—should reduce their own consumption.

Consumers to Get More Egg Products

Consumers will be able to get more egg products—such as prepared ice cream mixes, noodles, macaroni, and prepared flours—as a result of action by the War Food Administration yesterday revoking the Government's set-aside order on liquid, frozen and dried whole eggs.

Bakers, mayonnaise makers, and other food manufacturers also will benefit, WFA said.

to force the Administration to acquiesce, or actually to sponsor, a retail sales tax.

As originally drafted, the Stam program included a suggestion that present surtax rates be raised all along the line, to produce $1,266,000,000 additional revenue in the next calendar year. This part was scrapped when the committee turned thumbs down on increasing individual burdens.

October is COMMUNITY WAR FUND MONTH

In its two-fold job of supplying fuel for manufacturing processes in war plants and for vital household purposes in the homes of war workers, gas is one of our most critical war materials.

This applies to natural gas as well as to the coal and oil from which manufactured gas is produced.

To save material, to save transportation facilities, to save manpower the Government asks the voluntary cooperation ot every gas user toward reducing—in every way possible—the consumption of gas.

The Washington Gas Light Co. and its affiliated companies in nearby Maryland & Virginia are solidly back ot your Government in this conservation effort.

WHAT You CAN DO TO SAVE GAS

Gas Range

- Do not use oven—or any other range burner—for room heating.
- Prepare entire meal either on top burners or in oven, not using both at one time.
- Never boil a quart of water when you can do with a cupful. Reduce flame immediately when liquid has come to a boil.
- Do not turn on the gas until cooking utensils and food are placed over the burner, ready for cooking. Do not prolong preheating of oven or broiler needlessly. Turn gas off immediately when cooking operation is completed.

Gas Furnace

- Set thermostat at not over 65 degrees during the day; 60 or lower at night.
- During the day shut off bedrooms and other portions of the house not in use. Where practicable arrange to live in one or two rooms for most of the day.
- Check all openings for hidden drafts—apply weatherstripping and caulking. Where obtainable, provide storm doors and storm windows. Improve insulation wherever possible.
- Keep heating system and electrical controls in good operating condition.

Gas Refrigerator

- Allow ample time for cooked foods to cool before putting in refrigerator.
- Avoid overcrowding, leaving ample room for air to circulate on every shelf.
- Refrain from opening door more often than necessary.
- Set control to provide moderate, instead of extremely cold temperature.

Gas Water Heater

- Reduce the consumption of hot water in baths and showers.
- Keep faucets tightly closed; replace washers and repair other leaks.
- Avoid a continuous stream of hot water for hand washing and dish washing.
- Postpone or reduce heavy laundry work on extremely cold days.

Can't Quarantine Dogs

Once more the District of Columbia appears to be hamstrung, this time in meeting its mad-dog problem. Health Officer Ruhland has submitted what appears to be an adequate program to the Board of Commissioners, but it appears that the Commissioners do not have the power to carry it out in full. Presumably an act of Congress will have to be sought to eliminate the danger of mad dogs attacking citizens on the streets.

The first step in the Health Department's program is the rounding up of stray and unlicensed dogs in the District, estimated to number 30,000. The very fact that unlicensed dogs are almost equal in number to the licensed ones indicates a deplorable looseness of community management. But progress in removing this menace can be made if the dog pound can be given more workers and trucks, as the Health Department requests. It is in the control of licensed dogs that the government of the Capital City appears to be stymied.

An old statute dating back to 1878 authorizes the Commissioners, when they have reason to believe that mad dogs are at large, to require the muzzling of all dogs loose on the streets. The old law even goes so far as to say that the muzzles must be "good and substantial" and that they must be "securely put on to prevent biting and snapping." But a recent conference of health officials decided that muzzling cannot be safely relied upon to keep mad dogs from spreading rabies. Dr. Ruhland has asked for a regulation that would permit licensed dogs to be out of doors only on leash held by an adult. Since the statute prescribes only muzzles, however, the city fathers seem to have their hands tied. We hope that Congress will not miss the significance of this absurd situation when it comes to pass judgment upon Senator McCarran's bill to create a more responsible local government here.

Savings Or Taxes

The unrealistic feeling that a sizable slash in Government expenses will dispense with the need of a new tax bill has been dashed by Chairman Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee. Granted that we can save a lot of money in our war outlay and at the same time improve rather than detract from output, that would not sop up the "dangerous money." In the current fiscal year, as Secretary Morgenthau showed, there will be the fantastic sum of 42 billion dollars in "excess spending money." Savings will be helpful, of course, in reducing this inflationary gap. But at best they can be only an adjunct of a new tax program in relieving the pressure on prices and fighting the black market.

It is evident that the Treasury program has been abandoned as the basis of a new tax program. The trouble with it was that it did not live up to the philosophy back of it. This was the wartime need to lock up excess spending money which otherwise would compete in the diminished market for civilian goods and services. On figures, the Treasury would have incarcerated only a fourth of the outstanding money generated this fiscal year. Moreover, even this proportion faded on examination of the proposal. This included a lien on savings, as in the higher gift and inheritance taxes and the 100 per cent and more levy on the highest incomes. It likewise let off between 9 million and 11 million individuals as the result of the abolition of the Victory tax. No wonder the tax project aroused the suspicion that the scheme had been compounded of more than a little politics.

A new tax bill must carry out the Secretary's own prescription. "We know where the bulk of the new money lies," he said. "Four-fifths of all the income of the Nation is going to people earning less than $5000 a year." This is all spending money for which there is no equivalent market, at least in wartime. The method we suggest has been championed by Representative Robertson, namely, a general sales tax, not as the only item in the next bill but as the major item. To be sure, a general sales tax is regressive in terms of the philosophy of taxation. But what is regression in peacetime is common sense in wartime. Exceptions, of course, would need to be made—enough of them, indeed, to reduce any expectation that the general sales tax could constitute the entire program. The sales tax likewise should be made progressive. There is neither sense nor equity in treating all goods alike at a time when resources going into luxuries should be husbanded for the war effort.

The Ways and Means Committee would be bereft of fiscal statesmanship if it allowed a vague reliance on economy to serve as the excuse for drawing off the market at least 10 billions of actual spending money. We are glad to note some evidence of this realization. The committee must keep its eye on the urgent need to bring the demand for goods within measurable distance of supply. If it does, it cannot help but consider the sales tax. The onus is upon the opponents of such a levy to say by what other means we can apply relief to the place where lies, as Secretary Morgenthau himself admits, the greatest danger of inflationary pressure.

Wages Up, Prices Down

Leaders of organized labor have chosen a very poor time to renew their agitation against the stabilization of wages. The only reasonable argument they can make for loosening up restrictions upon wages is the much-repeated claim that the cost of living is rising so fast as to subject workingmen's families to a tight squeeze. And that is the argument which they apparently made when they went to the White House on Thursday to "kick the Little Steel formula around." But the most accurate information available shows that living costs are now moving downward instead of upward. The Bureau of Labor Statistics' cost-of-living index fell .05 per cent from July 15 to August 15 and food prices moved downward 1.3 per cent.

When this fact was pointed out to the labor men at the White House conference, they proceeded to kick around the cost-of-living index. As in the last war, they insist that the index does not fully reflect the increased expenses that bear down upon the family budget. In many cases this is unquestionably true. But in many other cases the index shows a greater increase in living expenses than has been actually experienced. The index was never intended to reflect more than the general trend of living costs. Its reliability in that field has recently been attested by a committee appointed by the president of the American Statistical Association. If the War Labor Board committee suggested by President Roosevelt to make a similar study should arrive at a different conclusion, the result might be greater confusion rather than less. Presumably a third investigation would then be necessary to determine where either the first or second went haywire.

The roots of this controversy lie in the unwillingness of labor chiefs to realize that stabilization must be a two-way street. If wages get out of hand, it may be impossible for the OPA to hold prices in check, with or without the aid of subsidies. Most of the inflationary pressure at present is coming from increased earnings, for average hourly as well as weekly earnings have continued to mount in recent months while the cost of living has been going down. Living costs have advanced during the last year less than 5 per cent, average weekly earnings more than 16 per cent. By any criterion that may be applied, industrial workers as a group have notably improved their position during the last year with respect to real income. If their standard of living has not advanced proportionately, that is a result of essential rationing and not of any deficiency in wages.

President Green of the AFL goes so far as to urge abolition of the Office of Price Stabilization. President Murray of the CIO lays particular stress upon breaking through the Little Steel formula. Both are bids for economic chaos in wartime. Apparently these spokesmen for labor believe that out of the confusion resulting from a breakdown of the stabilization program the interests of labor would come first. But the reverse might be true. What is needed is patriotic cooperation to hold a reasonable balance between the economic interests that are seeking special advantages out of the war. Labor is already in a highly favored position, so highly favored that its spokesmen could afford to indulge in a little statesmanship on this issue.

A Desert Blossoms

The story of the economic transformation of North Africa after its reoccupation by the Allies is one to gladden the heart. Here was an area which the Germans, during the period of Vichy rule of North Africa, had systematically and thoroughly looted. Its grain and fruits and phosphates and other products were siphoned out to the Reich. The result was that when our troops arrived they found a despoiled and hungry land.

North Africa is that no longer. President Roosevelt reveals that in the period preceding the victory in Tunis the United States and Great Britain shipped to North Africa 80,000 tons of flour, 6500 tons of wheat, 2800 tons of potatoes, 1800 tons of dried beans and peas, as well as varying quantities of other supplies. In addition, we sent seeds, agricultural machinery, fuel oil, fertilizers and other essentials. All this was required to put North African agriculture back into full production. That has now been accomplished. Last June North Africa produced a bountiful harvest, which made it possible for the Allies to reduce shipments of food to the region and finally to suspend them altogether. Indeed, North Africa has again been able to turn exporter. It has become a source of food supply for our troops, for the French army which is being built up there, and for the civilian workers and for the British and American forces in Sicily and Italy. Most encouraging of all, the French authorities, in collaboration with the Combined Food Board, have begun to accumulate food stocks for use in France after its liberation.

What has happened in North Africa during the past 11 months is an example of international economic statesmanship at its best. To be sure, it occurred in circumstances far more favorable than those we are likely to encounter in other liberated areas. At the same time the model cannot be gainsaid. It should be followed when we have wrested other regions from the German despoilers.

Prentiss M. Brown

The resignation of Prentiss M. Brown had been expected since he appointed Chester Bowles as OPA's general manager. It was felt at that time that Mr. Bowles was being groomed to take Mr. Brown's place as administrator. The succession has not yet been announced, but Mr. Brown has retired from what in the nature of things is a thankless job, particularly to a man of Mr. Brown's compromising temperament. In startling contrast to Mr. Leon Henderson, Mr. Brown sought to "sell" OPA, and his ingratiating methods only complicated his task. As in the case of Mr. Elmer Davis, whom he resembles in many ways, moreover, he took over an agency which was rent in factions. The main division lay between the academic and the business mind. Alternately Mr. Brown backed one and the other, with the result that dissension was fomented and was relieved only by a flock of successive resignations. Such a situation, of course, did not help administrative morale, though this has noticeably improved since the advent of the more tough-minded Mr. Bowles. It also accentuated the confusion in OPA policy.

At the time of Mr. Brown's appointment, The Post, while recognizing the administrator's excellent qualities, felt that it was a mistake to appoint a lame-duck Senator to executive office. We still feel that the practice undermines legislative independence. In Mr. Brown's case the President no doubt felt morally bound to do something for the Senator, for he had shouldered most of the burden in seeing the price-control bill through Congress. It was an excellent piece of parliamentary work, and a self-sacrificing one. For he was up for re-election as the junior Senator from Michigan and failed of reelection precisely because of his leadership in the fight for price control. It is always a pleasure to recall any act of a man who puts principle above preferment. This is Mr. Brown's due. But the qualities of the advocate that fitted him for the Legislature were of no use in the hard daily stint of administration. His successor would be well advised to quit "selling" OPA and concentrate on administration.

Return Of The Native

A small item published in a few newspapers announced the safe arrival in Italy of Count Carlo Sforza, who has been known both in this country and abroad as the most distinguished Italian opponent of fascism. His recent departure for southern Italy, under the apparent aegis of the Department of State, aroused some speculation as to his possible future role in European politics, especially if he is persuaded to enter the Badoglio government. But it seems to us that a more interesting speculation would concern the probable emotions of such a man returning to his native land after an exile of nearly 20 years.

For a genuine patriot, such as Sforza appears to be, exile is a harsh experience. Most of the classical poets considered it one of the greatest of human tragedies, and it will be recalled that, in the famous Sophoclean version, exile is one of the punishments visited upon himself by Oedipus after his discovery of his own guilt. Dante, one of those who tasted the full bitterness of exile, speaks of it in more than one eloquent passage. And the whole edifice of Christian theology has been built upon the conception that all life is a tragic exile.

That Sforza should have chosen such a lot rather than come to an accommodation with a regime he detested is a testimony to his character. Yet his seems a happier destiny than that of many exiles, for it has been given him to return, if not exactly in triumph, at least in great honor. In one sense, of course, his return may seem an even greater sorrow than exile itself, for it is to a country ravaged and blighted by the most terrible of wars that he returns.

INTERLUDE

The smoke of factories scribbled on the sky
A riddle yet unanswered, but close by
A leaf shook in gold light, a round bird slipped
Singing, from a branch; a small boy skipped
Along the twisted road; the answer sprang
Straight from the lively limbs, the bird that sang
Flute-clear and carefree in the evening-air!
Soon, soon, I knew, a star or two would stare
Wide-eyed through latticed branches in this wood;
The Night was stepping near to where I stood.
The bird would fold itself in quiet sleep;
The boy would dream of daisied hills, and leap,
Whistling, across brown brooks where pebbles shone!
I glanced around,—the bird and boy had gone!—
But not their music wrapping them with light!
Smiling, I opened up the gate to Night,
And she came through, and led me like a child
Home to my city, strangely reconciled!

Good Neighbors

By Virginia Prewett

Haitian Cooperative

THE HAITIAN-American Development Co., today one of the biggest cooperative undertakings in the Western Hemisphere, is the first of several projects in which United States capital and technical assistance are aiding Latin-American nations to overcome economic handicaps. It has also developed something else new under the sun—commercial rubber from a vine.

The United States, one way or another, has been taking a hand in Haiti's economic life since 1915. Adoption of the good-neighbor policy led to final withdrawal of our Marines. Economic help came through a reciprocal trade treaty and a loan for a road-building program. When in the late 1930's the United States Government made it possible for Latin-American governments to borrow technical experts, one of the first requests was for an agricultural adviser for Haiti.

Thomas A. Fennell, then chief of operations at the Department of Agriculture's Beltsville Research Center, was sent to Haiti in 1939 to advise them. Intensive research revealed definite possibilities for Haiti to develop a number of new noncompetitive exports for United States markets. This would do much to relieve Haiti's extreme dependence on European markets and reduce the country's vulnerability to upsets originating in Europe.

The question arose, How could Haiti do this? The country lacked the capital and know-how needed to make the shift.

The answer was the cooperative development company, called SHADA from the initials of its French name. The semi-official agency was created in 1941, with three Haitian and three United States directors. The Haitians put in $1,400,000 in assets which included a 50-year lease on 150,000 acres of timber land, $400,000 of construction machinery and a 50-year monopoly for SHADA on rubber exports. A $5,000,000 credit, secured by company stock, was obtained from the Export-Import Bank.

Thomas Fennel, as president, began to assemble a staff of American technicians. The original plan was to step up lumber production, to stimulate exports of sisal, rubber, essential oils, handicrafts and spices. With emphasis on rubber and sisal, SHADA began operations August 1, 1941.

War in the Pacific put these two products high on the critical list. Tree rubber takes five to seven years to grow and pressure for quick rubber set the SHADA staff on research on cryptostegia, a vine growing wild in Haiti.

The United States Department of Agriculture had proved that the vine was full of latex, but SHADA had to develop methods of planting, tapping and processing cryptostegia.

With successful ways worked out and proof that cryptostegia plantations could in a year's time begin to turn out rubber at the rate of 300 pounds an acre a year, SHADA signed a contract with Rubber Reserve to develop 100,000 acres of the vine rubber as soon as possible. They also agreed to put in 20,000 acres of sisal, used as a substitute for manila hemp.

Today SHADA has over 30,000 acres planted in the vine rubber. Fifteen thousand came into production in September. Eight thousand acres of sisal are planted. Over 90,000 Haitians work for SHADA, in cooperatives numbering from 5 to 20 farmers. Much of the land rented for the expanded program had been lying fallow or was very sketchily cultivated.

Cryptostegia plants set in rows make a sort of hedge. Each plant puts out from 7 to 10 shoots. At maturity, these are tied into bundles of 10 and cut off an inch every other day. Latex bleeds into milk bottles which are emptied each day. Each crop of runners has six months of production.

A year from now Haiti's quick rubber should be pouring out at the rate of 15,000 short tons a year, making Haiti one of the largest rubber sources of the United Nations. Haiti's sisal will come into production in two to four years. Lumber operations are supplying domestic needs already.

The company has paid all obligations on the dot and, with its program just beginning, has acquired a surplus. The United States technicians, managers, etc., that it has taken to set on foot this enterprise that at one stroke will aid the economy of a whole nation and supply us with needed war materials is very small, some 80 in all.

Methods of processing the vine rubber are improving every day and experiments are going forward to develop higher-bearing strains of cryptostegia. The cost of producing the rubber is at present relatively high, but it is expected to reduce this cost materially.

Postwar prospects for this new product are, as SHADA officials point out, subject to the same questions that all production today must face. It depends on what the nations of the world decide to do about trade barriers and international commodity trading. A general economic chaos would of course react on Haiti. But with a far-sighted economic policy that allows for the very close connection that economics and politics have, SHADA should set Haiti on a continuing cycle of improvement and development.

Another Stalingrad?

By Barnet Nover

The Struggle In The Dnieper Bend

A BERLIN spokesman has admitted that the southern German army in Russia finds itself today in an "extremely dangerous" plight.

He was stating the literal truth. The fighting along the great bend of the Dnieper—from Kiev south—has for the Germans all the ominous potentialities of another and possibly even greater Stalingrad.

There, last winter, a force of 330,000 Germans was surrounded by converging Russian armies and compelled to surrender. In the bend of the Don and in the Crimea an even larger German force is now threatened with entrapment.

THE TEMPTATION to escape that trap while there is still time must be one that the German high command feels very strongly.

The attrition of German strength has reached the point where the Wehrmacht could ill afford any further losses as great as those involved in the Stalingrad battle.

It is true the German army is still a very large and powerful force. But large as it is it has lost much if not all of its one-time flexibility, resilience and recuperative power.

Because of this circumstance, no doubt, the Germans, when they lost Stalingrad, found it expedient to abandon practically all of the north Caucasus area they had conquered in the summer of 1942.

By the same token, the failure of their summer offensive this year, followed by the loss of Orel, Belgorod and Kharkov, led them to carry out what was, on the whole, an orderly retreat to the Dnieper.

THE SITUATION that faces the German army on the Eastern Front today is, however, not so simple as that which faced them after the loss of Orel, Belgorod and Kharkov.

Their prime consideration remains, what it was then, namely, the maintenance of their military forces in Russia as an army in being. For while the loss of territory, even of such valuable territory as is involved in the present fighting, would be painful, the destruction of an army would be catastrophic.

It is fair to assume, therefore, that before the jaws of the Russian pincers closing in on the German forces in the Dnieper bend southwest from Kremenchug and west from Melitopol snap together, these forces will begin to extricate themselves as best they can.

THERE IS AS YET no sign that they have already begun to do so. On the contrary, the fierce fighting that has taken place at Melitopol, where the Germans have been holding by the very skin of their teeth and in the face of a fierce Russian onslaught, proves how unwilling the Nazis are to abandon the Dnieper barrier.

The reason is not hard to find. A retreat from the Dnieper might involve a retreat to a line as far west as the Bug. But such a retreat might have consequences almost as disastrous as another Stalingrad.

In the first place, such a retreat would involve the abandonment of the Crimea, which would mean the relinquishment of the Black Sea to Russian control.

Secondly, the loss of the Dnieper bend region would in all certainty involve the loss of Kiev, already threatened by flanking Russian forces, and with Kiev gone the whole German defense system on the Eastern Front would be unhinged.

Thirdly, a further and large-scale German retreat to the west would, by bringing the Russians closer to the Balkans, both by land and sea, enormously increase the centrifugal tendencies among Hitler's Balkan satellites.

IN VIEW of this "extremely dangerous" situation in which the German forces in the Dnieper bend find themselves, it is surprising and to some extent bewildering that Germany is today engaged in a persistent effort to reinforce her army in Italy.

Actually, of course, only a very small proportion—less than a tenth—of the force which the Germans are employing in Russia is being used by them in Italy. This does not mean that the Italian front is for them unimportant. It is very important. For should the Germans be driven out of Italy, both the intensity and range of Allied bombing would then increase.

As defeat is piled on defeat the factor of home morale has become for the Nazis of increasing importance. Up until recently, the events on the Eastern Front, disturbing as they have been, have been overshadowed in German minds by what has been happening to their cities. Bombing is a menace which they feel directly and immediately.

Under the circumstances the loss of Italy, which would bring the Anglo-American armies and air forces to Germany's very doorstep, is something which the German high command feels it necessary to avoid as long as possible, regardless of the cost and regardless of the needs of the Eastern Front.

Nazi Prisoners

My job has been for several months to help guard and convoy German prisoners to prison camps. I have had the opportunity to speak to hundreds of prisoners and find that the great majority attempted to justify Hitler's war by insisting that Germany is fighting to "rescue" civilization from the Red Russians. These prisoners denounce the Russians as "barbarians" and claim that we are misled by false democratic propaganda in fighting Germany. They cannot understand why America and England should be fighting against "civilized" Germany when the real enemy is Soviet Russia. All Germany wants, they say, is living space. It is the Russians, Jews and capitalists who stand in the way—therefore they fight.

This type of Fascist propaganda has completely poisoned the minds of Hitler's soldiers. The job of reeducating them in the United States for democracy will be a tremendous one.

Recently, I read with great interest that a German-language newspaper, Neue Volkszeitung, published in New York, is being permitted to circulate among German prisoners in this country. The issues of August 7 and 28, 1943, contained editorials dealing with the position of the Soviet Union on present and postwar policies.

The following is an extract from the August 7 editorial, which deals with the Free Germany Committee recently set up in the Soviet Union:

"Only a closer and far-seeing policy of the Anglo-Saxon powers can undo what the Moscow Manifesto obviously wishes to initiate, namely, carefully worked-out, close relationships between postwar Germany and the USSR."

And in the August 28 issue of Neue Volkszeitung, the following appeared in an editorial:

"They, the Russians, wish the western powers to take on themselves a new and heavy risk in the west, in order that they themselves shall have a better and easier chance for victory in the east. Note well, all this wholly out of friendship and without reciprocation. And with respect to Japan, where many Anglo-Saxon voices have also been raised on behalf of a second front to be opened by the Russians, they wish to bind themselves in no way."

I am sure that papers like Neue Volkszeitung circulating in prison camps will help bolster Nazi morale among German prisoners. Instead of circulating really democratic newspapers among prisoners, we permit this anti United Nations material in prison camps.

Reading these editorials, one could conclude that our enemy is Soviet Russia—not Germany or Japan. No doubt the Nazis among the prisoners will welcome such anti-Soviet expressions. J. A.

Blood Donors

I have been watching for some time, and with a great deal of interest, the advertising given to the Red Cross for blood donors. The Red Cross is doing a wonderful job in this respect, but what about the small donor center which is being operated at St. Elizabeths Hospital—operated at night for the convenience of those who cannot report to the Red Cross in the daytime hours? The work of this setup is purely on a volunteer basis, operates three nights a week, and the blood is sent to the American Red Cross. This small donor center is equipped to take care of as many as 35 or 40 donors in one evening, and yet, due to the fact that it has never been able to get even a line in the paper to let people know of its existence, almost every donor there has to be personally solicited for an appointment.

The Red Cross is fully aware of the days and hours that this center operates, and accepts the small, steady flow of plasma which it accumulates each week. The Red Cross repeatedly informs inquirers that there is no place where they can go for an evening appointment. This center has been operating for the last six months, has sent over 1600 pints of plasma to the Red Cross, and I think this should receive some regognition.

This center is always anxious and willing to make special arrangements for special groups—provided the group is large enough—even on the days when it does not operate. SUBSCRIBER.

Air Raid Drills

While in other cities in the country Civilian Defense organizations are being disbanded, the Washington unit still continues to hamper the war effort by staging air-raid drills at unlikely hours of the night, depriving war workers of their rest and endangering human lives needlessly.

This nonsense should be terminated immediately and the time and effort thus expended directed into some useful, sensible channel toward winning the war.

Finis Bixby Letter

Finis to the Bixby letter. In Van Doren Stern's "The Life and Writings of Abraham Lincoln" (Random House), page 289, you will read as follows:

"Just as Gettysburg is the most widely known of all of Lincoln's speeches, so this letter to Mrs. Bixby is the most celebrated of all his letters. At the request of Governor Andrew of Massachusetts, Lincoln wrote to Mrs. Bixby of Boston, to console her for the loss of five sons, who were supposed to have died in the service. The letter was immediately printed in many newspapers throughout the country.

"Afterward it was shown that two of the boys had actually died in action, one at Fredericksburg and one at Petersburg. Another reported killed at Gettysburg had been taken prisoner. Still another, who also had been taken prisoner, had enlisted in the Confederate ranks. The youngest son deserted and went to sea.

"Lincoln, of course, knew nothing of this when he wrote Mrs. Bixby."

It thus appears that Mrs. Bixby had five sons in the Union Army but only two who died in the service.

The record, to date, shows the Sullivan brothers as the first five brothers to die in the service at one time. R. E. O'FARRELL.

Home Politicians

What is the matter with the men on our home front? Clendenin is just a little country town nestled in the hills of West Virginia and I am a mere woman living in this town and I want to know, as thousands of other mothers do, what is wrong with the men on the home front that sit in high places of authority. Do you know that there is a world war going on? And that we mothers of America have sent our sons all over the world to fight for the freedom of America and to keep it out of the hands of our enemies—and here you men in high places smugly sit and play the game of politics and make our beloved America, for which our sons are giving their lives, a laughing-stock for other countries—"and the House of Commons roared with laughter."

I say stop it, and right now. And if this is the best you can do, better turn the whole thing over to the women—they could not do worse.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Missing Clues

NEXT TO knowing the whole story, there is nothing so useful as realizing that you do not know it. The temptation is almost irresistible — as I can testify from a long professional experience —to put together a story which seems to make sense though in fact, because the deciding data are missing, the story is not true. A very considerable part of the mischief and rumor that are brewed in Washington come from not wishing to spoil a cocktail party by confessing to the inquiring lady that General Marshall has not consulted you about our war plans and that you do not receive carbon copies of the messages exchanged by Stalin, Churchill, and Roosevelt.

LIPPMANN

It is important, therefore, to bear always in mind that at places like Casablanca, Quebec, and now Moscow, the main preoccupation of the responsible men concerned is with matters that they could not possibly disclose. They cannot disclose their working estimates of the military situation, the time-table and the components of their military plans. Yet nothing else is fully intelligible without this knowledge. We must remember that there is almost always this vacuum in our information, and not yield to the temptation of substituting for the crucial military knowledge we lack a story based upon ideological and political theories which are at a dime a dozen.

THUS THERE is much speculation these days as to why the Russians continue to harp upon the need for a second front in Northern Europe when all our military plans, as drawn up at Quebec, have been fully and carefully communicated to them. Now while I do not know that it is so, it is quite conceivable that the explanation may be exactly what Colonel Akimov, writing in a Moscow newspaper, says, namely that "the Red Army's recent successes have made the situation more favorable" than our estimates prophesied the situation would be when British-American plans were made in August.

If that is the case, or even if the Russians believe it to be the case, a reconsideration of our military plans by the highest authorities would obviously take precedence over any other question we wish to discuss with the Russians. For the time when and the manner in which the war is concluded will necessarily fix the conditions of the armistice and the settlement and of the postwar cooperation.

I DO NOT KNOW and do not profess to have an opinion, as to whether the actual time-table of military action in Europe is running ahead of the time-table of our military plans. But experience shows that this can happen in war. We know that the Germans defeated France so much more quickly than the German General Staff anticipated that they were unable to exploit the victory fully by pushing on to England.

We know now that our military plans for the occupation of North Africa were based on too conservative an estimate and too pessimistic intelligence reports of the amount of Vichy French resistance we would encounter if we had tried to seize Tunisia at once. We know also that the fall of Mussolini and the turnabout by Badoglio took place several weeks ahead of our military timetable, and that consequently we were unable to take full advantage of our victory over Italy.

IN EACH case enormous political consequences followed from the military circumstances. If, for example, we had seized all of French North Africa in the first place instead of having to fight a long military campaign in Tunisia, in all likelihood no such acute conflict would have developed between our sense of military expediency and a wise political policy in our relations with the French. And clearly, if we had been ready and able to land in Rome, Genoa, and elsewhere as soon as Badoglio came over to us, the indescribable tragedy of the war in Italy might have been averted and the whole Balkan position transformed radically and at once.

We have had it explained to us that logistics control our invasion of Europe but we must not fail to realize how much military intelligence estimates control logistical planning. If, for example, you plan an operation against Kiska on the assumption that there are ten thousand Japanese there ready to do or die, it will take you so and so many weeks to assemble the necessary force. But suppose there are not ten thousand Japanese on Kiska.

IN DISCUSSING our relations with Russia today we must remember that the substance of much that seems enigmatic is almost certainly to be found in military factors about which soldiers differ and to which the general public has no access whatever. The deepest secret of the war is involved—namely differing judgments about the actual military positions of Germany and of the Allies.

Not sharing this secret, we must beware of resorting to farfetched theories to explain what can almost certainly not be explained without knowing the secret. As an example of a farfetched theory, I have seen it argued recently that the Russians are harping on a second front because, believing that we shall not open a second front, they wish to establish the fact that they have won the European war singlehanded and are entitled therefore to dominate the whole of Europe. This is the kind of story which seems to make sense but is not true. It is not true because our soldiers believe in a second front and are preparing one. If there is an issue with the Russians it is not whether but when. Moreover they know when our soldiers think it can be done, and if they disagree, it is because they think, perhaps rightly perhaps wrongly, that the German position is such that the second front can be opened sooner.

Whatever the truth about the timing of the operation, it is in either case certain that the Russians cannot be prodding us to invade Europe with a million men if their real interest is to dominate Europe alone. You do not invite in an army of a million men if you do not wish to cooperate with the governments which send in the army. If the Russians thought they could defeat Germany singlehanded before we plan to land, and if they wished to dominate Europe alone, they would obviously encourage us to stay in England, to bomb Germany from a distance and let them invade and occupy it.

SOME ONE ought to invent a phrase, like wishful thinking, which describes thinking which tells the story of Hamlet without the story of the Prince of Denmark.

Union Groups Oppose Further Newsprint Cuts

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Oct. 22.—Declaring the American free press is "threatened by permanent impairment," 13 Pittsburgh locals of AFL, CIO, and independent craft unions today protested proposals for further drastic reductions in newsprint.

In a telegram to War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt, reminding him that newspapers already had been restricted to about 85 per cent of 1941 consumption, with a further cut of 16 per cent recommended, the unions asserted:

"We protest the failure of the War Manpower Commission to give the manufacturing of newsprint an essential status and we strongly urge that the commission take steps at once to add newsprint manufacturing to the essential list."

Telegrams of protest were also sent to Donald M. Nelson of the War Production Board; Representative Lyle H. Boren (Democrat) of Oklahoma, chairman of the House Committee investigating the pulpwood and paper industries, and Pennsylvania's United States Senators and Congressmen.

Waste Unabated

"Waste of paper and nonessential use of paper continues unabated while the free press of our country, which is the backbone of our democracy, is threatened with permanent impairment," the unions charged.

United States Senator James J. Davis (Republican), Pennsylvania, acknowledging the unions' protest, promised to appeal to Congress for appointment of a committee to study the situation and suggested a Nation-wide waste paper drive be started, "beginning with the cleaning out of useless archives in Washington." He added:

"We have the beginning in curtailment right in Washington where millions of pieces of publicity are sent out to flood the Nation.

"All other uses of paper should be sacrificed in all other lines rather than sacrifice the public press."

Urges Loggers' Release

By the Associated Press

Senator Chandler (Democrat), Kentucky, proposed yesterday that wood pulp be declared a strategic material and that enough trained loggers be released from the armed services to forestall a further newsprint shortage.

"The precedent was set last year through the release of several thousand miners to mine strategic minerals," Chandler said in a statement. He added:

"The current shortage of wood pulp, from which newsprint is made, has reached serious proportions. There should be no shortage of newsprint in this country. We have the necessary material, we have the trained men, and we need the newspapers.

"Two things have contributed to this condition; first, an apparent lack of a definite policy in the distribution of the available supply and second, the fact that many loggers producing the necessary material in the forest from which wood pulp is made were either drafted or allowed to go into higher-paid jobs in the shipyards and industrial plants without due regard to their value in their own work."

Coal Strike Order Issued by WLB

ported them continuing.

The board sent telegrams announcing the show-cause hearing to Lewis, William Mitch, Alabama district president of the UMW, and I. W. Rouzer, president of the Alabama Mining Institute, organization of coal operators.

According to UMW officials, Lewis is confined to a sick bed at his home in Alexandria.

Meanwhile, WLB completed public hearings on the proposed Illinois coal pact which were called to hear objections to the agreement voiced by operators from the Appalachian coal producing area.

WLB questioning centered around the amount of additional work time that would be provided by the new contract which replaces the existing seven-hour day spent actually mining coal with an eight and a half-hour day measured from portal to portal, including underground travel time.

Officials indicated that they were prepared to approve payment for additional working time, but questioned the propriety of approving compensation for the time spent traveling.

WLB Vice Chairman George W. Taylor stated that the figure on the amount of additional coal that would be produced by the contract is "the most critical figure in the whole case." He suggested that Illinois operators return with what data they had on the subject, and they promised to do so.

Several hours later, after the hearings had adjourned, a WLB spokesman announced that the Illinois operators had returned with some figures, but not the figures requested.

Board Chairman William H. Davis indicated that the board would use a Bureau of Labor Statistics survey made in 1936 which placed travel time in Illinois at 42 minutes, in the absence of more recent data. On the basis of the BLS figures, it was believed that the board might decide to trim additional pay provided in the proposed Illinois agreement by at least 37½ cents a day.

The agreement provides for payment for the additional hour and a half time at $1 an hour, meaning an average increase of $1.75 to $1.83 a day depending on the amount of overtime worked.

The board's obvious annoyance at the absence of positive data on the travel time question raised the possibility that the board would reject the entire pact. However, WLB officials asserted that any such rejection, if it occurred, would be accompanied by a detailed directive indicating the kind of contract the board is prepared to approve.

UMW Board Member Theodore Mitchell told reporters at West Frankfort, Ill., that "all the mines in the State will be out in three days" as a result of statements made by Davis indicating that the amount of the wage increase proposed might be trimmed.

Hugh White, Illinois UMW vice president, described the walkouts as "the answer" to Davis' comments.

Earlier the UMW accused the Appalachian operators of attempting to "terrify the public" with estimates of increased coal costs of 45 to 60 cents a ton if the proposed Illinois contract is extended to the industry generally.

UMW Board Member Percy Tetlow told the WLB, "this is an old game with the operators. They do it in every wage conference."

Korean Girl, WAVE Ensign, To Serve Here

Ensign Susan Ahn, 28, the first Korean-American in the WAVES and daughter of the late Ahn Chang Ho, who was a leader in the Korean Nationalist movement before his death an 1937 in a Japanese prison hospital, will report for duty here Monday at the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics.

SUSAN AHN

Ensign Ahn, who received her commission Tuesday at the United States Naval Reserve Midshipmen's School at Northampton, Mass., is an American citizen because she was born in Los Angeles. Her brother, Philip Ahn, is a Hollywood motion picture actor and has just completed work on "The Story of Dr. Wassell."

After receiving the bachelor of arts degree from Santiago tate College in California in 1940, Ensign Ahn worked there until her enlistment in the WAVES last December. During her service as an enlisted WAVE, she was assigned to the Naval Air Station at Miami, Fla. She entered the Midshipmen's School August 28.

Ensign Ahn, who is living at 1028 Connecticut ave. nw., explained yesterday that her father had been arrested in 1932 in Shanghai by the Japanese who disapproved of his leadership in the nationalist movement designed to free Korea from their rule. Her mother, Mrs. Helen Ahn, lives in Los Angeles.

Father of 11 JoinsNavy; May Get $308 a Month

Shreveport, La., Oct. 22 (AP).—A 34-year-old Negro, Tom Washington, father of 11 children ranging in age from 5 days to 15 years, has been sworn into the Navy here as a volunteer.

Navy officials said Washington's allotment would be $308 a month under the proposed Servicemen's Allotment Act. The family lives on a farm.

Lanham Fund Eyed for Job At Gallinger

District officials yesterday took first steps toward installation of Commissioner Guy Mason's new program for correction of conditions at Gallinger Municipal Hospital as they studied possibilities of securing Lanham Act funds to carry out the plan.

Foremost on the list of changes was the erection of a new laundry building, first advised by a Senate District Subcommittee investigating Gallinger, and appointment of 610 employes to be put on a 48-hour week.

Commissioner Mason's program came as a result of the senatorial probe, which was climaxed by a report urging the dismissal of Mason himself, District Health Officer George C. Ruhland, Gallinger Superintendent Edgar A. Bocock, and two other Gallinger physicians.

No Definite Assurance

D. V. Auld, liaison officer between the District government and the Federal Government, said he had discussed the matter of securing Lanham Act funds with the Commissioners but he was unable to state definitely if this course would be followed.

Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, Gallinger superintendent, said he had conferred yesterday with Nathan C. Wyeth, municipal architect, regarding construction of the new laundry building and the modification of old buildings. He said exact specifications for the structure could not be determined until after it was known what equipment might be obtained.

Dr. Bocock submitted to Budget Officer Walter Fowler a list of 619 employes he recommended be placed on a 48-hour week. These included 206 nurses, 114 attendants, 54 orderlies and maids, 60 temporary orderlies and maids, 104 dietary workers, 12 nurses' home staff, 4 X-ray workers, 12 laboratory workers, 25 laundry workers, 15 elevator operators and 13 telephone operators.

300 More Man-Days

It was pointed out that if the 48-hour week were placed in effect for these employes it would amount to over 300 additional man-days which could be utilized by Gallinger. Employes would be paid overtime according to their salary basis.

Commenting on the improvement program, which was proposed by Commissioner Guy Mason, Senator Holman (Republican) of Oregon, a member of the subcommittee which investigated conditions at Gallinger, said yesterday:

"I am glad Commissioner Mason is taking hold. He can be assured of our cooperation in the matter. We must not lose sight of our goal, the improvement of conditions at Gallinger for the poor unfortunates who have to go there."

Naziism Reported Unpopular in Its Munich Birthplace

Stockholm, Oct. 22 (AP).—A Swedish traveler just completing a trip through Germany said today that strong reaction is piling up against Naziism and Prussian militarism in Munich, birthplace of National Socialism, fed by a desire for postwar separation from Prussia. He pictured Munich as desiring inclusion in a Danubian federation.

Anti-Nazi feeling at Munich has been strengthened by 'action against Catholics," he added.

He gave the Stockholm newspaper Dagens Nyheter this further picture of the situation:

"All the people of Munich hope to gain their freedom from Prussia. Nazi subordinates in Munich are aware of this feeling but are afraid to report the trend to Hitler and Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler for fear they will lose their jobs. So they furnish false reports on the conditions in order to hide the true situation."

The Gallup Poll

Women Favor Drafting of Themselves For WACS Before Fathers Are Taken

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 22.—The old saying, "It's hard to guess what's on a woman's mind" would seem to apply especially to male Congressmen in Washington.

Many Congressmen and others in the Government have shied away from proposals to draft owmen for the WACS, WAVES and other organizations because of the fear that the women of the country would strongly resist such a step.

Yet when the women of the country were interviewed on this question in a Nation-wide survey it was found that they are overwhelmingly in favor of drafting members of their own sex for nonfighting jobs before drafting married men with families.

This was disclosed in a Nation-wide study just completed by the institute in which men and women in every State were asked the following question:

"The Army can either draft 300,000 single women, aged 21-35, for the WACS for nonfighting jobs, or it can draft the same number of married men with families for the same work. Which plan would you favor?"

The vote throughout the country is:

Think single women should be drafted	73%
Think married men with families should be drafted	19%
No opinion	8%

Even more interesting, certainly more significant to authorities in charge of recruiting for the WACS, is the vote of the single women themselves. Here is a table showing the vote of single women, included in the survey, as compared to that of married men, on the issue:

	Single Women	Married Men
Think single women should be drafted	72%	70%
Think married men with families should be drafted	23%	21%
No opinion	5	9%

The vote of all women, including that of many mothers with daughters who would be affected under such a draft, shows an even more favorable sentiment toward taking single women in the place of fathers:

Vote of All Women:
Think single women should be drafted	77%
Think married men with families should be drafted	16
No opinion	7

The results of this survey, particularly the vote of the single women, will be of especial interest to Army authorities. The Army would like to have as many as 500,000 WACS. To date the volunteers have totaled less than 100,000.

The experience of both the last war and this war is that the raising of large groups for national service is virtually impossible by voluntary methods.

The present study emphasizes that if conscription proves necessary, those most affected—the single women themselves—are in favor of such procedure.

Contingent of D. C. Recruits Departs for WAC Training

In the caucus room of the old House Office Building, 125 girls yesterday "joined up," as soldiers say, and left at 3:30 p. m. for Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., where they will receive their "boot" training to become WACS. The contingent, 100 of them from Washington, was in charge of Lieut. Ruth Essary, daughter of the late Fred Essary, Washington correspondent, and Lieut. Margaret Baltes, Sleepyeye, Minn.

The enlistees are the first from the District under the all-State recruiting campaign, begun locally.

The caucus room was filled by relatives and friends of the enlistees. The principal speaker was Representative Randolph (Democrat) of West Virginia, chairman of the House District Committee, and a deep hush fell and held for a moment or two when he finished with "Good luck—God bless you."

Exercises were in charge of Capt. Bernice Kiplinger, WAC staff officer for the Military District of Washington. Others on the program were Mrs. James Clement Dunn, opening remarks; Maj. Gen. John T. Lewis, Commissioner J. Russell Young, who presented the District flag; and Lieut. Helen K. Cooper, in charge of WAC recruiting office.

The Washington girls in the contingent are:

Bioff Says He Split $25,000 'Fee' With Former NRA Aide

By International News Service

New York, Oct. 22.—Willie Bioff testified in Federal Court today that Sol A. Rosenblatt, former NRA administrator for the moving picture industry, received 25 per cent of a $25,000 "fee" paid Bioff by George Skouras, a theatrical chain operator.

Bioff was on the stand for the ninth day in the trial of eight men charged with extorting more than one million dollars from the movie industry under threat of calling strikes by the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes.

Rosenblatt is an Army colonel and general counsel of the Democratic National Committee. Bioff said Rosenblatt received the money allegedly helping Skouras solve a "problem."

The problem was that Skouras was having trouble obtaining bank loans because his operational costs were $60,000 higher than a competing theater chain, Bioff said. This was in "October or November, 1937," Bioff testified, and the solution was worth $50,000.

An operational level was reached between the chains, according to Bioff, when he boosted the competitor's labor costs $60,000. Skouras wasn't pleased with the way the "comparable basis" had been achieved, Bioff said, so he only received half of the $50,000 fee."

Bioff and his former boss, George Browne, former president of the IATSE, have both been convicted of extorting more than $2,500,000 from the movie industry.

Lazo to Leave His OEW Post for Private Business

The resignation of Hector Lazo as assistant director of the Office of Economic Warfare in charge of the Office of Exports was announced yesterday.

The resignation submitted early this month will be effective November 1. Lazo will return to private business.

For some time he was connected with the Department of Commerce's Latin American division, and came to OEW from the presidency of the Cooperative Food Distributors of America. He also was secretary-treasurer of the National Retailer-Owned Grocers Incorporated.

Coolidge Beats Anacostia, 26-0, Holds Lead

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The White House missed the boat, we think, when it decreed that this year's Army-Navy football game must be played at West Point as a travel conservation measure, in a stadium seating less than 20,000.

POVICH

Like good soldiers, the Army and Navy people didn't squawk at the ukase of the Commander in Chief; they couldn't very well, and they are going down the line to carry out the directive that no tickets be sold to fans beyond a ten-mile radius of West Point, but they don't necessarily approve the idea.

An Army-Navy game in a big football stadium this year could have been the medium of the biggest single war bond selling campaign that might have been dropped into the lap of the Treasury Department. With admission limited to bond buyers, it was sure-fire to sell out any stadium and tilt war bond sales to individuals by scores of millions.

It would have been a dream attraction for the Treasury, bringing in the money from individuals rather than the rich institutions. The Treasury gets the big money from banks and corporations anyway. It is the bond sales to the man on the street that the Treasury likes as a counter-inflation measure.

The White House can probably be forgiven for making the Army-Navy game purely a local contest at West Point in the interest of travel curbs, using it as an example of the seriousness of the transportation problem, but a greater good could have been achieved, we think, by exploiting the service game as a bond-selling medium. Certainly everybody would have understood that the Government was not encouraging travel, merely capitalizing on a football game it happens to own.

Restricting the game to West Point and to fans within a ten-mile radius is sort of a joke, anyway. The passenger miles it saves is no saving at all. The trip of the Annapolis team to West Point probably means more mileage than a meeting of the two teams at Philadelphia, where they'd like to play, in big Franklin Field. If the game were restricted to Philadelphia fans, thus reducing fan travel to a minimum, it would still be a sell-out.

The farcical part of it is that Navy, for example, during the next month will travel to Cleveland, to New York and to Philadelphia to play football games, yet must not play West Point in any of these cities. Thus the inconsistency of it all. If Navy is permitted to take these trips to play teams other than Army, there seems to be no cause for the White House to lean over backward to the extent of making the Army-Navy game a local affair at West Point.

They played last year at Annapolis, and the restriction on tickets was so rigid that the 15,000 seats at Thompson Stadium weren't nearly filled. In theory it probably reduced travel, but the same game played in a bigger city and limited to that city's fans would have achieved the same effect and permitted thousands more to see the show.

The travel restrictions on sports teams are tremendously inconsistent anyway. That was demonstrated last spring when Baseball Commissioner Landis ordered the baseball teams to train in the North instead of the South. And so what happened? The Nats, for example, booked an exhibition game in New York and another in Newark, using up more passenger miles in an acute travel area than they would have done by going to Florida for spring training.

Again this year, Landis has said that the baseball teams must train in the North, but the purpose will be defeated if the same long exhibition game trips are scheduled in the North. Certainly the football people thought it was all right to train as far away from base as California. It doesn't add up.

When it was decreed last year that the regiment of West Point Cadets, some 1200 of them, couldn't make the trip to Annapolis to cheer for their team, that was proper enough. A cheering section was no vital necessity and such a mass movement would have been unseemly in these times. The Navy regiments won't travel to West Point with their team next month and that is understandable, too, but the movement merely of two football squads to a big stadium for an Army-Navy game would seem to be too trifling to object to.

It's still difficult to reconcile an order forbidding the Army-Navy squads to meet at a half way point like Philadelphia, and raise no barrier to a trip such as Navy is taking to Cleveland to play Notre Dame ten days hence. The propaganda effect of using the game as an example on travel restriction would seem to be outweighed by the other and better uses to which the game could be put. This is just our idea. Maybe the White House knows best.

As the Bell Tolled Off Another Score for Western

Brian Bell (61), the lad who has put the raid in Western's Raiders this year, goes over for the second Western touchdown against Central as Gordon Brown (26), Central guard, and Marty Kirsch (40), tackle, fail to stop him. It was with just such leaping tactics as this that Brian continued to crash through the Viking forward wall for substantial gains throughout the game.

Western Vanquishes Central Eleven, 20-6

Colts Capture Fourth Straight Win; Raiders Tie Riders for Second Place

Coolidge High swept over outclassed Anacostia, 26-0, yesterday, for its fourth straight in the high school series as Western took the measure of the Central Vikings, 20-6. Roosevelt took a 26-0 beating from Washington-Lee and Wilson trounced Georgetown Prep by the same score. George Washington High stopped Fairfax, 12-0.

The Colts' victory virtually clinched a place in the series championship playoff, for they have to win but one of their three remaining games to make it. Roosevelt and Western, tied for second place, must win two games each of their three remaining to make it a three-way tie. Wilson, with two victories, a tie and a loss, must win all three of its remaining games to stay in the championship running. The other four schools are out of it.

Brian Bell Paces Western Victory

Sparked by the line plunging of Brian Bell, the Western Raiders yesterday clapped down more Central passes than you can shake a stick at to win, 20-6.

The white 61 on Bell's red jersey stood out like a beacon throughout the game, until he was taken out in the fourth quarter. That was the point where Central advanced from midfield to the 10-yard line. Coach Fred Mulvey quickly put Bell and a couple of other first stringers back in the game, but it was too late. Crandell passed to Walden on the 5, then took it around right end for the only Viking score.

Western threatened early in the first period, but had to kick on the 24. Central couldn't gain and kicked back to the 50, where Bell tossed a 35-yard pass to Stratos, then bucked over. Guillott missed the kick.

Western Scores Twice

Favored by the wind, Bell kicked from midfield to the Viking 2-yard line early in the second period. Central kicked back to the 35, and Bell ran to the 12. Then Bill Stratos ran it to the 6 and Bell went through center to the 1-yard line and a first down. From there Bell went over with ease. The Raiders' third one came on a Central fumble in the third on its 18-yard line. Bell passed to Stratos on the 1 and went through for the score. Love converted.

Central's passes started clicking in the last five minutes of the final quarter. Ed Crandall threw one to Jim Donohue for 20, another to Walden for the same distance, others to Walden for 15 and 5 yards, then ran wide around right end for the score.

Colts Continue Unbeaten March

Coolidge High's Colts registered their fourth straight interhigh victory yesterday in a 27-0 triumph over Anacostia's Indians on the losers' field to remain undefeated, untied and unscored upon.

"Addie" Bassin sparked the Colts with two touchdowns and a decisive pass interception to his credit.

Coolidge scored on the first play of the game after Anacostia had made no headway in three downs on its own 30 and kicked out on the Colts' 31. Coolidge then took over and John Schulenbarger dropped back to his 15 to heave a spiral to Bassin, who snagged it on the midfield stripe and galloped to a touchdown. Tackle Bob Webb booted the extra point.

Late in the second period Bassin intercepted Don Purdy's pass on the 35 and Dick Bergman carried the mail on two fake pass plays that put the ball just 1 foot from a score and on the third try went over left tackle for the second score.

Indians Knocked Back

Speedy Coolidge linemen hit Purdy in his tracks on the 25 when the Colts kicked off in the second half and Flea Flaherty tried two pass plays, one which was responsible for a 15-yard penalty for intentional pass grounding that put the pigskin on the 15. With third down and 25 to go, Flaherty tried to get off a punt that was "tipped" by Bergman and downed on the 9 by Barry Shields. From the 9 Bassin raced around right end for another 6 points. Webb added another point after that, making the score 20-0.

Second string Back Ed Laing ran from his own 40 behind second string blocking late in the third quarter to score the fourth touchdown. Webb added his third extra point.

W-L Wallops Riders, 26-0; 14th Straight

Washington-Lee High School's Little Generals ran their consecutive winning streak to 14 yesterday when they defeated Roosevelt, 26-0, on Ballston Field.

Thrill of the day was Myron Gerber's 95-yard touchdown run in the last quarter. The play was started by a W-L specialty, the screen pass, thrown by Billy Earl, on his own 5-yard line.

Two of the four Blue and Gray scores came in the first period. Billy Earl went around right for 10 yards before passing to Trobia, who was downed on the 4-yard line. Gerber went through the line for 2 yards, and Earl went through again for the score. Druckenmiller kicked the extra point.

Earl again started a scoring play when he threw a 10-yard pass to Dick Granger, who ran 40 yards for the second touchdown. Druckenmiller again converted.

In the third period, Earl passed again, this time to Bill Stevens, who took it behind the goal line.

Roosevelt's only threat came when the Raider's recovered Glen Crunkleton's fumble on the W-L 23-yard line in the fourth period and worked the ball to the 8-yard stripe where they lost it on downs.

Frank Trobia, first-string quarterback for W-L, returned to the line-up yesterday. He had been out for two weeks because of an infected face.

Terps Primed for Lion Battle This Afternoon

By Al Costello

Post Staff Writer

University of Maryland's Old Liners come up to their "game of the year" today at 2:30 p. m. at Byrd Stadium, College Park, decided underdogs but decidedly determined to do their darnest for a big Homecoming crowd against a rugged Penn State eleven.

Bigger, faster and reputedly tougher after having held undefeated and powerful Navy to a one touchdown victory last week, the Nittany Lions, at first glance, appear to have the stage set for a romping victory. But Maryland's youngsters may have spoken their piece when the long shadows creep onto the football field.

The squad is keyed up for the game. This is the game the Terps want to win more than any on the schedule. And if this Old Line team does come through, it will be the first time in four previous meetings that the Black and Gold is returned victorious, even when the Old Liners had such luminaries as Bill Guckeyson and Jim Meade carrying the ball.

Terps Outweighed

Maryland will be outweighed in the line between 10 and 15 pounds per man. In the backfield it will be 20 pounds. On top of that, Maryland will be without the services of its best end to date, Pat McCarthy, who has won a regular job with a bigger team—Uncle Sam's Army—and Wilbur Rock, a former Central High lad who has been alternating at end and tackle. Rock is down with a twisted knee.

Thus Maryland's line will line up with Charley Doory, a former back, and Les Daly, a reformed guard, at the wings with Dick Terry, a reserve center and Bob Hafer, a guard in reserve. At tackles will be Mike Zetts, a newcomer to the squad, and Larry Cooper, who is just about the only man on the Old Line squad who hasn't been juggled around by the desperate "Doc" Spears. Walt Klodne will be available for relief tackle duty. Guards will be Mike Teslovich, a former tackle, and Pete Karangelen while at center Ed Hurson, who started out at end, will hold forth.

Maryland's Backfield

The backfield will be composed of Joe Makar, who has developed into the Old Liners' best passer and closest thing to a triple-threat man, at quarter; Dick Tuschak and Charley Ryan at halves and Bill Pirronello, a 165 pounder, at fullback. Joe Chisari, a strapping 190 pounder who only recently joined the squad and who saw a little action against West Virginia last week, is also slated to see some action.

Probable lineups:

Penn State	Position	Maryland
Smyth	L.E.	Doory
Hapanowicz	L.T.	Zetts
Ross	L.G.	Karangelen
Powers	Center	Hurson
Jaffurs	R.G.	Teslovich

Trumbull	R.E.	Daly
Cenci	Q.B.	Makar
Williams	L.H.	Tuschak
Castignola	R.H.	Ryan
Richards	F.B.	Pirronello

Time of game—2:30 p. m.

Elect Povich

D. C. Sports Writers Form Association

Shirley Povich, Washington Post sports columnist, was elected president of the newly formed District of Columbia Sportswriters Association at the organizations first official meeting at O'Donnell's Restaurant yesterday. Oscar Davis, Daily News sports editor, was elected vice-president; Dick O'Brien, boxing writer for the Times-Herald, was elected treasurer, and George Huber, boxing and scholastic writers for the Evening Star, was named secretary.

Active membership will be limited to members of the various local sports departments and news services and active raido sports announcers. Associate memberships will be restricted to leading local sports personalities.

Plans were drawn for the establishment of centrally located headquarters and club rooms. Principal aim of the association is to bring about a closer relationship between athletes, coaches, promoters and various sports officials with the working press and radio. A resolution was drawn asking an early settlement of the current boxing controversy by the District Boxing Commission, Promoters Goldie Ahearn and Joe Turner and Mike Uline.

Wilson Downs Little Hoyas By 14-0 Count

Wilson High's Green Tigers claimed their third win in five starts, sweeping over Georgetown Prep, 14-0 yesterday on the winners' grounds. From the opening kickoff, which was run back to the Georgetown 30-stripe by Fullback Pearce Godfrey, to the final gun the Little Hoyas just weren't able to drive farther than the Wilson 30.

Initial score came in the first period and ended a drive that reached the 5, where Henry bulled over. End Bill Tanney kicked the extra point.

Quarterback Bill Haycock took a pass on the invaders' 30 from "Stu" Brown in the final period for the other score. Henry plunged over for the fourteenth point.

Coaches Back Mentor Sued By Player

By the Associated Press

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 22.—The Ohio High School Football Coaches Association has thrown its "support and sympathy" behind James L. Lymper, Galion High School mentor, who was sued yesterday by a student seeking reinstatement on the grid team.

Ralph Webster, president of the association of some 500 coaches, said its board of directors had promised "to do all we can to help" Lymper.

Ralph W. (Bill) Stoner, jr., 17-year-old senior at Galion High, asked the Common Pleas Court to order Lymper to reinstate him to the squad on which he played two straight years. Lymper said the youth was barred this fall for not participating in spring workouts.

Young Stoner and his father also asked a $25,000 judgment against Lymper, charging he deprived the youth of "a scholarship in several colleges and the right to enjoy and receive a college education" by uttering "false, malicious and defamatory statements" about him.

Webster said "things are pretty bad when a coach can't select his own team."

H. R. Townsend, State High School Athletic Commissioner, disclaimed jurisdiction, but remarked: "I'm not going to sit back and see anything happen that might force a coach to use a boy he doesn't care to use, if I can help it."

GW Stops Fairfax, 12-0

George Washington High School stopped Fairfax High's passing attack cold last night, except in one instance when the half whistle came to G. W.'s assistance, and won, 12-0.

Curt Kirby and Jim Dodge carried the mail for G. W. in the first period, taking the ball down the field on three first downs. Then George Boteler tossed a 15-yard pass to Joe Hensley, who was waiting in the end zone. The kick was wide. Allen Cummings began his passing attack in the second period and Fairfax had marched to the 3-yard line when the whistle blew.

The third period was a kicking duel between the 20-yard stripes, but in the fourth Campbell blocked Fairfax on the 20 and it was a 25-yard Boteler-Hensley combination for the second score. Campbell's 30-yard pass to Jim Moeller brought a Fairfax down to the 20 again, but Lanham intercepted the next one, and that was the ball game.

Rickey to Decide Durocher's Status Monday Afternoon

New York, Oct. 22 (INS).—President Branch Rickey of the Brooklyn Dodgers and Leo Durocher met in a lengthy conference today and the former indicated that he would announce Monday afternoon whether Durocher will manage the club again next season.

Today's meeting was held in the privacy of Rickey's Long Island home, but he invited the press to gather at his Brooklyn offices Monday.

When asked whether he had given Durocher a definite answer, Rickey replied:

Board Orders Hubert-Garner Fight Probed

An investigation of the Tee Hubert-John Garner fight of last Monday at Turner's Arena, which resulted in a four-round kayo victory for Hubert, will be conducted by the District Boxing Commission at its regular meeting Monday at 2 p. m. at the commission's Municipal Center offices, it was learned last night.

Apparently unsatisfied with the outcome and having heard ringside comment which hinted the bout may have been a "bag" fight, Thomas P. Morgan, jr., acting chairman of the D. C. Boxing Board in the absence of Chairman Claude W. Owen, has ordered both Garner and Hubert, and their respective managers, John Sullivan and Walter Johnson and John Carter, Referee Charley Reynolds and Judges Jimmy Sullivan and Dr. Frank Schuyler to appear for questioning and testimony.

Ga. Tech-Navy Clash To Lure 45,000 Fans

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Post Staff Writer

Provided unbeaten Navy concentrates on Georgia Tech tonight in Baltimore instead of looking ahead to Notre Dame next week, the Middies figure to get by the Ramblin' Wreck with points to spare in their final "home" game of the season in Municipal Stadium at 7 p. m.

Upward of 45,000 fans are expected as Navy seeks its fifth straight victory against Coach Bill Alexander's ball-handling wizards from the South. Navy has a little memoir of last season in mind, a 21-0 beating in Annapolis, only the second game in a series begun in 1922 when the Middies won by two touchdowns.

Navy Will Be On Spot

With North Carolina Pre-Flight, Cornell, Duke and Penn State in its wake of victims, Navy will be on the spot against the team which held Notre Dame to a 21-13 score at half-time before succumbing to a barrage of five Irish touchdowns in the second half.

Georgia Tech will match the brilliant Eddie Prokop, of last year's Cotton Bowl team, and Red Broyles, the all-round back and kicking specialist, against Navy's numerous and talented backs paced by the 150-pound triple-threat artist, Hal Hamberg.

Bob Jenkins, the transfer from Alabama and Jim Pettit, the speedster, will return to playing form from the injured list and work with Hillis Hume, Ben Martin, Hal Hamberg and Bill Barron, all scoring threats among Coach Whelchel's wealth of backfield talent.

Tech Has Weight Edge

Captained by its fine defensive center, Mutt Manning, Georgia Tech will enjoy a weight advantage over the Navy line. Al Channell, captain and left end of the Navy, and Don Whitmire, another former Alabaman who is working up an important case for All-American honors, are stalwarts of the Navy forward wall.

Manning and 10 other players in Georgia Tech's V-12 program will play their last game tonight and that may be a bad omen for the Middies.

Thirteen companies of Midshipmen, 2000 in all, will march into the stadium at 6:25 p. m. following the boat ride to Baltimore and a four-mile march from the docks.

Probable lineups:

Navy	Position	Georgia Tech
(82) Channell	L.E.	Tinsley (86)
(74) Gilooly	L.T.	Harper (4)
(83) Brown	L.G.	Steber (45)

(76) Sprinkle	R.T.	Morrow (13)
(34) Johnston	R.E.	Kilzer (64)
(30) Maloney	Q.B.	Stein (26)

Irish, Middies and Wolverines Are Favored in Big Games Today

By Harold Claassen

Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Oct. 22.—Tempting the fates another time while picking the football winners:

Southern California over College of Pacific—having picked and watched the Staggmen win when they were the betting underdogs, we now dope them to lose when they are generally regarded as the favorite. Both teams are undefeated and their meeting is expected to attract 60,000.

Navy over Georgia Tech—Coach Bill Alexander of the Southerners says this is one of the best teams he has ever coached, but the report is that not even Capt. John (Billick) Whelchel knows how many good footballers there are at Annapolis. They are opening the Baltimore Stadium for the 45,000 fans.

Michigan over Minnesota—Michigan and Fritz Crisler need the help of former Gopher Bill Daley to bring the Little Brown Jug to Ann Arbor. The annual Midwestern classic will be witnessed by 45,000.

Notre Dame over Illinois—Thirty thousand fans will turn out to say farewell to Angelo Bertelli in his final home game, otherwise the Illini might make it more interesting than you think.

Southwestern of Texas over Southwestern of Louisiana—A year ago their meeting wouldn't have collected 2000 fans, but tomorrow the two schools who have benefited more than any others from the Navy's lend-lease will entertain 20,000 at Houston.

Army over Yale—Tim Hoopes, Yale's captain, is sidelined with injuries, but even his return wouldn't help much.

Northwestern over Ohio State—Now that Otto Graham has found the range it will be too bad for the Buckeyes, but the 35,000 spectators will be hoping for the best.

Cornell over Colgate—Mike Micka still is one of the best backs around, but Colgate will need more than that. They are playing in neutral Syracuse and will have 17,000 spectators.

Louisiana State over Georgia—That Cook-to-Smith passing combine is potent, but we are putting both our dollars on Steve Van Buren, whose blasting brought the Tigers a 34-to-27 victory in a previous meeting this fall.

Nebraska over Kansas—Figuring that the Huskers are overdue.

Tulane over Southern Methodist—The Greenies have completely recovered from the Memphis Technicians debacle. Some 30,000 fans are expected.

Pennsylvania over Columbia—Penn has one of the best rounded attacks in the east, which is bad news for the 20,000 New Yorkers who have tickets.

Colorado College over Colorado—One of the best teams in the West comes out into the open.

Purdue over Iowa—Tony Butkovich will toy with the young Iowa line.

Georgia Pre-Flight over North Carolina Pre-Flight—Not much to choose but figure the Skycrackers all-around ability will pay off.

March Field over Washington—It is the first test of the year for the lonely Huskies, only major northwest team to carry on. Both are undefeated but the Soldiers have had the sterner opposition.

Texas over Rice—It is all Texas.

Indiana over Wisconsin—Again it will be too much Hoernschemeyer.

Tulsa over Utah—Just who is going to stop Tulsa?

St. Mary's Preflight over California—Too much experience on the Navy side.

Bonura Decorated By Eisenhower For Baseball Work

Allied Headquarters, Glaiers, Oct. 22 (AP).—Corp. Henry J. (Zeke) Bonura, for many years a major league first baseman, has been awarded the Legion of Merit Medal by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

BONURA

The New Orleans baseball star was given the medal for "Exceptionally meritorious conduct" in organizing and managing a successful baseball program for the Mediterranean base section.

"By his resourcefulness, enthusiasm and leadership he was able to overcome many shortages in needed assistance and construction materials and he established 20 baseball fields in the area through the use of volunteer assistants and salvaged materials," the citation read. "Corporal Bonura has made a substantial contribution to the morale and efficiency of troops in this theater."

Prepmen Win

Georgetown Prep 120-pounders registered an easy 27-0 victory over Landon Intermediates yesterday at G. U. Prep field. Dean Lewis, tallied twice for the Tiny Hoyas and Guyer and Foley once each. One of Lewis' tallies was a 55-yard gallop.

Bucknell Rallies, Beats Temple, 7-6

Philadelphia, Oct. 22 (AP).—Bucknell came from behind in the fourth quarter tonight to trim Temple, 7-6, before 5000 in Temple Stadium.

The victory came when Walter Szot intercepted a Temple pass and ran it to the Owls' 4, from which Gene Hubka advanced it 2 yards and Dick Hoffman the rest of the way. Gene Worst's perfect placement netted the extra point.

Temple scored midway in the second period when Corbin Thomas recovered a Bucknell fumble on the Bison 4 and Charlie Goetz lunged through for the touchdown on the first attempt. Tony Hubka's point try went wild.

By Jimminy Wins Galloway

Scores Easy Victory in Stretch Run

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, Oct. 22.—The Galloway Purse, involving a clash of 11 juveniles at 6 furlongs was the best offering on the Friday program and proved a romp for Alfred P. Parker's By Jimminy. The colt turned on the heat in the stretch and then coasted into the finish line 2½ lengths in advance of the Greentree Stable's Dustman. E. K. Bryson's Vim was third and a length behind the place money.

Jockey Charlie Givens rode confidently on By Jimminy and the son of Pharamond II was clocked in 1:13 3-5 over a fast track. A crowd of 13,000 saw the afternoon's action.

Dustman and Vim, both well played in the machines, hooked up in a head-and-head pacemaking duel directly after the break. Jockey Givens wisely took no part in the speed performance, waiting in third position for the stretch run.

In the straightaway, Givens clucked to By Jimminy and the Bradley-bred youngster moved up, took command and romped the remainder of the way to bring his backers a $5.20 mutuel. Dustman was less tired from early usage than Vim and led the latter to the wire by a length.

Jockey George Woolf was fined $50 for hitting Picotee, W. L. Brann's colt, over the head after the finish of Thursday's Maryland Futurity . . . Picotee, a full brother of Pictor, lugged in and probably would have won but for that . . . The stewards also announced that Jockey C. Hooper had been fined $100 for cutting over too sharply in the seventh race on the same card. Hooper rode Defense, the winner . . . A. J. Sackett's Tola Rose, a surprise entry in the Washington Handicap, is being shipped here from Belmont Park by Trainer Max Hirsch. Jockey W. Mehrtens is coming from New York to handle the veteran . . . Entries for Tuesday's program will be closed tomorrow at the usual time. There will be no racing at Pimlico Monday.

Prelims Added To Monday Card

Promoter Joe Turner yesterday added a pair of sixes to his Monday boxing card, featuring Heavyweights Georgie Parks, local 21-year-old Negro, and Larry Lane of Trenton. In one, Dan Biggers of Baltimore will meet Jimmy Bell of the local Apollo Club. Aaron Perry, sensational lightweight, will meet Earl Wintz of Baltimore in the other. The eight-round semi-final brings together Oscar Goode, Lane's sparmate, and Corpl. Billy Duncan of Fort Belvoir.

Leone vs. Macricostas

Michele Leone, Boston villain, and George Macricostas, Golden Greek, who worked to a stirring 30-minute draw last week, were rematched yesterday for a headline match on next Wednesday night's wrestling show at Turner's Arena. It will be Macricostas' first headline battle.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NATIONAL ANTHEM, $5.10, $3.80, $2.80; ROLLO, $4.10, $3.00; PICO BLANCO II, $3.20.

NATIONAL ANTHEM was steadied closest to pace of BAGPIPE, took command when asked and held on gamely under good handling in final flat drive. ROLLO was always within striking distance, moved up boldly approaching final fence and fought it out with good energy. Roberts' foul claim against winner for crowding at final fence was not allowed. PICO BLANCO II improved position in final stages and showed good effort.

FOURTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 1:42. Off at 1:43. Winner, M. Gilbert's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TONY STEEL, $44.00, $19.00, $9.30; RESIDUE, $13.30, $10.80; TOWN HALL, $23.30.

TONY STEEL, steadied while racing in first flight and on outside, responded when shaken up to improve position and was up in concluding strides under strong handling. RESIDUE was not hurried early, rallied approaching stretch and came gamely at close. TOWN HALL was always within striking distance, came to inside to take command and faltered in final 70 yards.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $2000; allowances. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 2:10. Off at 2:12. Winner, Alfred P. Parker's br. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BY JIMMINY, $5.20, $3.60, $2.50; DUSTMAN, $6.20, $3.30; VIM, $2.70.

BY JIMMINY, in first flight from start, responded when placed to pressure to take command, won with speed in reserve. DUSTMAN was hard used racing in front with VIM and was tiring gradually at close. VIM forced pace of DUSTMAN, took brief lead and then faltered.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1200; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 2:40. Off at 2:40. Winner, Nydrie Stable's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SENATE, $9.30, $4.40, $3.20; PROCLA, $4.50, $3.50; COBEGGO, $3.60.

SENATE, under stout restraint while within striking distance throughout, moved to lead when asked and drew clear to win with speed in reserve. PROCLA improved her position gradually, but could not seriously threaten winner. COBEGGO, shuffled back nearing half-mile pole, went to outside to move into contention and then hung in closing test.

SEVENTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $2500. For 3-year-old fillies. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:10. Off at 3:10½. Winner, Walmac Farm's b. f. (3), by Peace Chance—Swank. Trained by J. J. Greely, Jr. Value to winner, $1650; second, $500; third, $250; fourth, $100. Time, 1:14.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FAD, $16.40, $7.00, $3.20; ADROIT, $4.10, $2.50; TELLMENOW, $2.30.

FAD, not hurried when outrun in opening quarter, was lucky to get through on inside while moving to leaders, was hard ridden in closing eighth to win in going-away fashion. ADROIT shook off TELLMENOW in first quarter, took clear advantage on turn, but could not resist winner. TELLMENOW raced with leader early and faltered.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $2500. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:41. Off at 3:42. Winner, E. R. Bradley's blk. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLACK GANG, $62.40, $15.20, $6.10; SMOLENSKO, $3.10, $2.60; TAGEL, $4.80.

BLACK GANG, hustled to front early, was well rated to stretch where he responded to a hard drive to hold rivals safe. SMOLENSKO, well placed from start, saved ground to stretch, was in tight quarters momentarily and then just got up for the place. TAGEL forced winner's pace to last few strides where he faltered.

WE PAY HOMAGE TO "THE GREATEST MOTHER IN THE WORLD"...THE AMERICAN RED CROSS

From the fogbound Aleutians to the steaming jungles of New Guinea; from the windswept shores of Iceland to India's coral strands... the Red Cross Angels of Mercy are everywhere on the march, ministering to suffering humanity. Besides nurses recruited by The Red Cross, hundreds of young women have been sent to far-flung posts to staff Red Cross Clubs.

On the home front more than three million American women are working as volunteers for the Red Cross. Thousands are making surgical dressings, garments and knitted articles. Nurses' Aides are assisting professional nurses in hospitals; Gray Ladies are upholding the morale of patients, reading to them, writing letters for them and helping them in many ways.

As Dietician's Aides, in the Nutrition Service, as Staff Assistants... in a hundred different ways the women who serve with The Red Cross are performing their tasks tirelessly and unselfishly.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

PENTAGON STORY

Last winter, Joe Civilian, rejected for military service, was given a job in the Pentagon Building. Joe was a good mixer; an extrovert, and he smiled at all the girls and spoke to all the men. On his second day in the Army building he noticed Marion, an attractive blonde. Joe smiled pleasantly and gave her a wink.

Marion didn't respond. In fact, she got peved and reported Joe to her commanding officer, who relayed the incident to Joe's commanding officer, a hard-boiled colonel, and he was treated as though he were a captured Nazi. Joe was given a sort of civilian court-martial. After that he felt as though he was an unwanted Pentagon child.

Joe tried to get transferred to another job but the tough old colonel wouldn't release him. Instead, the officer continued to punish Joe by giving him tedious and routine-killing work such as copying from fine print—he was rejected for Army service because of his poor eyes—and other officers were forbidden to give him work. But still the colonel wouldn't release him.

But Joe finally got out from under the stern old colonel and now he's very happy. And Marion is, too. They announced their engagement last week.

NAVY PROBLEM

The trouble civilian contract employes have working at Navy's Arlington Annex in trying to get checks cashed is a classic example of beaucratic arrogance. One can easily go hungry waiting to get the cash.

About the only means of solving the banking problem is the Pentagon bank. So-called permanent Navy employes have no trouble getting to the bank as their picture passes are honored by the Pentagon guards. We contract employes have temporary passes and we aren't allowed to get past the guards. And we can't get into the building(as the powers that be have ruled that cashing a check isn't official business.

We put up with many inconveniences to work at the Annex. In addition, our checks are always late and it took six weeks to get us our first checks. But the check-cashing bottleneck is one inconvenience that could be worked out. Or is it too much to expect Army-Navy cooperation?

STENO'S PLIGHT

In recent column the Federal Diary has repeatedly called attention to the shortage of stenographers in Federal agencies. I can remember similar stories when I first came here two years ago.

Now I'm resigning, too, despite the appeals of those I work with to remain on the job. Like many of the girls who preceded me, I'm now convinced that it's a drawback to enter Federal service as a stenographer.

Here, briefly, is my case history: I was assigned to a $1440 job in the Treasury Department two years ago. Eight months later I was given a raise to $1620, but not until after the department had started to hire beginners at that same salary. Months ago I was promised $1800. My efficiency rating is excellent and I'm supposed to be the best stenographer in my group. I've had two years of college training and I was graduated from a business school.

In my two years in Government I've seen boys and girls with no previous training whatever put in jobs that pay what I'm getting. I was capable of producing a finished product the day I entered the Government while it has taken weeks to explain the routine to many of the newcomers.

It's discouraging enough to see the untrained get the same salaries, but within the past three months alone I've seen (1) a former clerk made a personnel technician at $2600, (2) a classification investigator at $2300, (3) two clerfiks promoted to the statistical section at $2000, (4) six got jobs in other Government agencies at higher salaries, and (5) two others made supervisors at $2000 each. During this time not a single stenographer got a promotion.

I applied for several of the vacancies. I was told I was a skilled stenographer; that stenographers were scarce, and that I was doing more important work. But stenographers aren't so important or so scarce that they're paid equal pay for equal work. I may be back in Government some day but I'll be smart and start out as a clerk.

THANKSGIVING A HOLIDAY?

My husband, who recently returned from overseas, suggested that we spend Thanksgiving with his family if he isn't sent out on another assignment in the meantime. I told him I'd have to work on Thanksgiving and that I had worked every holiday during my 18 months with the War Department.

He was very much surprised. He told me that British government employes had been made to work on holidays but now only the very essential war officers are kept open. The British, he said, discovered that the employes as a group didn't work on the holidays and that more work was accomplished by closing the offices on the days before and after a holiday. It helped morale.

I'm sure the same thing holds true here. I've seen very little useful work accomplished on holidays. Employes grumble . . . they're tired and they really deserve a break. Most private employes get Thanksgiving off, so why not Federal workers? . . . Federal Diary of the Air, tomorrow at 4:35, WRC.

30-Foot Pillar of Fire

Bus Stopped at Corner Bursts Into Flames; Passengers Escape Unhurt in Sudden Blaze

CHARRED FRAMEWORK of Capital Transit Co.'s Tenley Circle-Pinehurst crosstown bus was all that was left after the vehicle was destroyed by fire at 41st and McKinley sts. nw. early last night. All of the passengers escaped without injury. Fire is believed to have started when gasoline ignited.

More than 20 passengers aboard a Tenley Circle-Pinehurst crosstown shuttle bus escaped injury last night when the bus caught fire and was badly damaged at 41st st. and McKinley st. nw.

The driver of the bus was Aubrey W. Johnson, of 444 Grosbena lane, Bethesda, Md. He said he had stopped at the corner and as he did so some one yelled "fire."

He opened both the front and rear doors to permit the passengers to escape and as soon as the bus was clear, it broke into flames which leaped 30 feet high, searing the leaves of a tree under which it was parked.

Flames Extinguished

Two fire trucks from Chevy Chase, Md., responded and extinguished the flames. Igniting gasoline is supposed to have been the cause of the fire.

In another accident Mrs. Jessie Camille Lane, 74, 735 2d st. ne., was struck by an auto while crossing 2d st., near the 500 block ne. yesterday. She was admitted to Casualty Hospital.

Police said the auto was driven by Mary Foreman, 910 Maryland ave. ne.

Charles M. McRider, 42, 715 5th st. nw., suffered bruises when he was struck by a trolley car while crossing F st., near 6th nw. He was admitted to Casualty. Operator of the trolley, police said, was Charles T. Pickett, 22, of 102 15th st. ne.

Trolley Passenger Hurt

A trolley passenger, Mrs. Arlene Everitts, 30, of 313 6th st. ne., was admitted to Casualty for observation after she was injured when the trolley collided with a Navy vehicle operated by Victor G. Everett, 22, of the amphibian base at Solomons, Md. Operator of the trolley was listed as Faddis M. Davis, 26, of 142 11th st. se.

Struck by an auto while crossing Pennsylvania av. near 6th st. se., yesterday, Edgar O. Moose, 33, of 115 10th st. se., suffered bruises. He was treated at Providence Hospital and discharged. Operator of the auto, police said, was James J. Carroll, 48, 1313 Potomac av. se.

A streetcar operated by Carl Collier, 45, of 316 10th st. ne., collided at East Capitol st. and 2d st. se. with a taxicab, operated by John L. Thomas, 26, of 3328 Alder pl. ne. Thomas was treated at Providence Hospital and released. Helen Krumenaker, 32, of Piney Point, Md., a passenger in the cab, was admitted to Casualty Hospital. A second passenger, Janet Cummings, 17, of 5 Bowling Green st. se., was treated there and released.

New Housing For 2300 Idle In D. C. Region

Twenty-three hundred publicly financed housing units, capable of sheltering that number of families, are standing vacant in the Washington area, awaiting tenants, a spokesman for the Federal Housing Authority revealed yesterday.

However, 1100 of these units are being reserved to furnish homes for an anticipated influx of workers for the armed services expected to be brought here.

The units have just been completed.

"The tight housing situation in Washington is easing somewhat," the spokesman said. "This is the result of the leveling off of Government civilian employment and, of course, the construction of more housing here."

He said the agency's information was to the effect that Government employment would remain stationary now with the exception of new workers brought here to replace those sent to the armed forces.

The only outlook for further increases were the anticipated needs of the Capital Transit Co. and other large employers.

Reflecting the easing of the situation have been recent advertisements in the want ad columns of local papers where for the first time in some months, landlords have been advertising for roomers and on at least two occasions, rooming houses have been offered for sale.

Decision Reserved In Plea to Quash Fraud Indictments

Chief Justice Edward C. Eicher of District Court, reserved decision yesterday on a motion to quash the indictment against James B. Underwood, charged with Representative Curley (Democrat) and four others with mail fraud and conspiracy in an alleged war-broker scheme here.

Opposing counsel are to meet next Wednesday to set a date for the trial. Yesterday, Roy Frank, special assistant to the Attorney General, suggested November 8 for trial, but Attorney Nicholas Chase, representing Curley, asked for a date after January 1.

Attorney Arthur Hilland, representing Underwood, asked the indictment be quashed on the ground that the grand jury which voted the indictment was illegally empaneled and that Underwood was not advised of his constitutional rights to claim immunity before the grand jury.

'Small Fry' In Racket Loses Probation Plea

Justice David A. Pine of District Court stated yesterday that it was an unwise policy to put agents of the numbers racket on probation because the "racket is an organized crime that propagates more serious offenses and leads to corruption of public officials."

He then gave William L. Jackson, Negro, 56, who had no prior criminal record, a three-month jail sentence. In response to a plea of Attorney James O'Shea that Jackson be given probation, Justice Pine said:

"I am opposed to that. The backers of the racket simply use the small fry until they—the small fry—are caught, and then employ other small fry. It is a mockery to have a system which permits such practices."

Clarence Barnes, 21, a leader of the Negro Moslem sect here, was given a 16-month to four-year prison sentence for violating the Selective Service and Training Act by failing to return a questionnaire to his draft board.

To Barnes, who said his religion didn't permit him to fight alongside unbelievers, Justice Pine said, "Despite the fact you may be sincere in your belief, it still does not relieve you of responsibility particularly in wartime."

Fahy Is Reported To Be Choice for U. S. Appeals Court

Informed circles yesterday mentioned Charles Fahy, Solicitor General, as a choice for the position on the United States Court of Appeals bench made vacant by the resignation of Judge Fred M. Vinson to become Director of Economic Stabilization.

Fahy, second highest official of the Justice Department, was said, however, not to be seeking the judgeship and there was no evidence that it has been offered to him formally. There were those among his associates who said he might prefer to keep his present position, at least for the duration of the war.

Fahy, born in Georgia and now a resident of New Mexico, went to the Justice Department from the National Labor Relations Board, where he was general counsel.

$841 in Narcotics, $150 Cash Stolen From D.C. Hospital

Narcotics, valued at $841, and $150 in cash were stolen from the pharmacy of Providence Hospital Thursday night, it was reported to police yesterday. Almost 4000 morphine sulfate hypo tablets of various grains, more than 14,000 morphine sulfate with atropine sulfate tablets of various grains, and several ounces of cocaine and codeine powders were among the narcotics reported taken.

This is the second report of a theft of narcotics to be made in the last two weeks. Thieves entered the pharmacy of Garfield Hospital October 8 and removed narcotics valued at $175 dollars from a drawer there.

Social Worker Joins Red Cross Staff Here

Ruth Emerson, associate professor of medical social work at Chicago University, has been appointed to the national headquarters staff of the American Red Cross, it was announced yesterday. She will serve as assistant chief in charge of the Red Cross domestic hospital program and as special consultant in medical social work.

A graduate of Smith College and the Simmons School of Social Work, Miss Emerson served as a medical social worker in the 1917 Halfax disaster, and during the first World War, as medical social worker for the Red Cross in the Chelsea Naval Hospital, and later in the office of the surgeon general of the Army. She is on leave of absence from her Chicago University post where she directed social service work at the university clinics.

Roosevelt Has Cold; Appointments Canceled

President Roosevelt had a slight head cold yesterday and canceled all his appointments, including his usual Friday morning news conference.

The Chief Executive remained in the residential section of the White House following his daily checkup by Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire, the President's personal physician.

Divorce Attorneys' Fees Here Range From $35 to $20,000

Divorce attorneys can be hired for as little as $35 nowadays if a little shopping and haggling is done along Lawyer's Lane, across the street from District Court.

On the other hand, fees as large as $20,000 have been charged in individual cases. The average fee, however, is $150. A capable lawyer seldom will take a divorce case for less than $100.

Almost all of the 1900 divorce cases which went through the court last year involved little-known people. This is demonstrated by the average alimony and maintenance award, which is a little over $12 a week.

Wealthy Shun Local Courts

Most of the more wealthy who get divorced leave the local courts alone, traveling to Nevada or Florida, or else to places where the newspapers are not likely to notice the case.

Nevertheless, the local traffic is brisk enough to support six licensed detectives doing divorce work.

The cause given in most divorce suits is five-year voluntary separation. Second comes desertion, then cruelty and adultery. It is primarily in adultery cases that detectives are hired. In not more than 10 cases a year do these adultery cases reach the indictment stage, although at least one District Court Justice regularly sends them to the U. S. Attorney's office for investigation.

The justices are wary of "collusion" between attorneys or litigants in uncontested divorce suits, for "agreement" between counsel expedites results. To protect the rights of defendants in uncontested suits, a lawyer is appointed by the court.

Many Cases Investigated

To guide the court, many cases are investigated by the Domestic Relations Commissioner, especially when children are involved. The local courts almost always award the child to the mother, unless it be shown that she does not wish the child or is incapable of caring for it.

What the lawyers think of their clients can best be ascertained in such restaurants as "Pete's," where they go after trying cases. One of the city's leading lawyers says, "It doesn't always hold, but the divorcing people make you lose faith in the rest of the people."

33d Degree Conferred On 91 Masons

Senator Byrd, Six D. C. Men Among Those Accepted At Rites Here

Ninety-one members of the Southern Jurisdiction of the Ancient and Accepted Order of Scottish Rite Masons, six of them Washingtonians and the seventh Senator Byrd of Virginia, were accepted into the thirty-third degree at closing ceremonies of the order's five-day meeting here last night.

The convention was held in the House of Temple, 16th and S sts. nw. Grand Commander John H. Cowles officiated at the ritual and also at a banquet held earlier in the evening at which no speakers were heard, as is the custom.

Rear Admiral Harry G. Hamlet, U. S. Coast Guard, retired, was class representative. Appearing for the other 90, some of whom did not come to Washington, Admiral Hamlet accepted the honor on behalf of the class.

There are two jurisdictions in the United States. The other, the Northern jurisdiction, will meet in Buffalo next September. The meeting that closed last night will not resume again for two years.

The Washington men to receive the degree, other than Admiral Hamlet, were William C. Corbett, Marvin E. Fowler, Robert S. Regar, Elmer E. Rogers and Robert P. Smith.

The Southern council was formed in 1801, at Charleston, S. C. It includes the States south of the Mason-Dixon line and west of the Mississippi River, 33 in all.

Visiting representatives from the Northern jurisdiction at last night's ceremony included John S. Wallace, of Newcastle, Pa., deputy for the Northern jurisdiction, and General Grand High Priest, Ray V. Denslow, of Trenton, Mo., of the General Grand Chapter, Royal Arch Masons of the United States.

Dance Begins Navy Week Activity Here

The observance of Navy week opened here last night with a dance for several thousand enlisted Navy personnel at the Uline Arena, 3d and M sts. ne., with music by Vincent Lopez's orchestra and a brief address by Gov. Charles Edison, broadcast from New York.

Calling attention to the fact that next Wednesday is officially designated as Navy Day, Governor Edison declared: "On this Navy Day, we are especially proud of our fleet, which is the strongest in our history and the greatest in the world."

After predicting that victory will come to America through the courage and fighting ability of Navy men, Governor Edison said that the Navy was carrying on the same traditions which prevailed when it helped fight for freedom in the early days of this country.

"All of us cannot join the Navy but we can help the Navy League, which is sponsoring the week's observance and doing a splendid job in this war," Gov. Edison said in conclusion.

Other phases of the observance of Navy Week here include an exhibit of naval wartime art at the Mayflower Hotel, traditional noon ceremonies on Navy Day before the monument to John Paul Jones, and a Navy Day dinner at the Mayflower, at which Eric A. Johnston, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, will be principal speaker. Congressman James W. Wadsworth of New York will be toastmaster at the dinner.

The exhibit of paintings will open Monday in the north gallery of the Mayflower and will include those of Lieut. Comdr. McClelland Barclay, now reported missing in action; Chief Boatswain's Mate Hunter Wood of the Coast Guard and a series by Lieut. Carl Shreve of the United States Marine Corps. The animated beehive exhibit of the Navy's Seabees will be on display in the lobby of the hotel.

Increase in Output Of Many Supplies Ordered by WPB

Increases in production of widely varying commodities, such as iron skillets and precooked baby foods, were announced yesterday by the War Production Board and the War Food Administration.

Since existing facilities, manpower, and supplies of cast iron are considered sufficient, the WPB greatly liberalized production of most iron cooking ware, including household kettles, sugar or wash kettles, butchering kettles, Dutch ovens and flatirons. The only decrease in the quota allowance was in the case of muffin pans and corn or break-stick pans.

The WPB also increased today by one-sixth the amount of organic dyestuffs and organic pigments permitted to be used for civilian purposes. The relaxation was allowed because military requirements for certain types of dyes are being reduced.

Three D. C. Girls Honored

Three Washington girls have been honored by the University of Wisconsin for their records and achievements as students during their first two years there. They are Virginia Anne Miller, 3324 Military rd. nw.; Joan B. Brodie, 1640 Connecticut ave. nw., and Janet M. Fracker, 2745 29th st. nw.

First-Hand Testimony

Two Soldiers Add Mite as Fund Pledges Reach Half-Way Mark

PEACE FOR THE AGED—You can help provide it. Contributions to the Community War Fund help, among other institutions, the Hebrew home for the Aged, at 11th st. and Spring rd., nw., where Mrs. Bessie Schwartzberg (above) is pictured spending her declining days in peace and security

As the Community War Fund reached its half-way mark last night, with $2,385,098.15 or 50 per cent pledged of the $4,800,000 quota, evidence of its meaning—in the form of letters and contributions from two American soldiers—one of them raised in orphanages here, came to fund headquarters.

The two are Washingtonians, who knew the city before war made it the focus of a world-torn world, and who are now fighting so that they may return to it in peace.

They are Pvt. Joseph M. O'Connell, whose "home" was provided by the Catholic Charities, one of the home-front agencies supported by contributions from the fund, and Sergt. Garth P. James, Marine combat correspondent, whose wife lives at 801 South Royal st. in Alexandria, Va.

Tucked into the letter from O'Connell, who is at Fort McClelland, Ala., waiting to join his three brothers overseas, was a crumpled one dollar bill—one day's pay, as his contribution to the Community War Fund. This is what he had to say about it:

"I was 3 years old when my mother died. The Catholic Charities took me in and also took in my three brothers who are now in the services with me. They also took my sister. I was in St. Ann's with my little brother. Then I joined my other two brothers at St. Joseph's Home and School. My sister went to St. Vincent's.

"All together I have six brothers and two sisters. Now, the four of us boys you helped to bring up in this world are fighting to protect it. It was you who taught us how to become good Americans. Thanks a million!"

Hopes It Can Help

"Inclosed is a day's pay to be contributed to the War Fund. It's only a little, but I hope it can help. All the money on earth right now couldn't express my thanks for what you have done for me and my family. My three brothers are now overseas. I expect to join them soon. I wish you all the luck in the world in your campaign." Signed, Pvt. Joseph M. O'Connell.

Sergeant James is already overseas. From some unnamed post in the Pacific, he thinks about the home he left and hopes to return to it at the war's conclusion.

"The knowledge that pepole are watching his home fires while he's censorable thousands of miles away is pretty comforting to a guy in a foxhole," he wrote.

The Great Difference

"This spirit is the spirit of humanity: the difference between us and them. Adolf and Tojo don't worry about the man or his family or those of their Axis partners. It's the differences which will tell in the end."

He came across a newspaper announcement, he said, asking "for lots of dollars for the USO and the relief agencies of our country and those of our Allies."

And so—"Enclosed is a small contribution to help you a little further toward your goal."

"It isn't just to send you the money that I write, but also I wanted to tell you that men out here think your outfit is doing a bang-up job. And a great many more men know of the fund than you'd think. They're glad to know, for instance, that Joe Civilian is doing that little extra bit, besides working and paying his taxes, which will help service families in a spot.

USO Rates Highly

We're glad to know you're helping the USO. When Marines are in the States, they use the USO; nearly everyone who comes here reminisces about his last liberty and begins with: We went to the USO, and, from there . . .

Knowing Americans, I'm certain youll raise all the money you need, the Marine concluded.

Today at 11 a. m. in the new South Interior Building, 1000 War Manpower Commission employes will meet to rally their fund-raising forces. Paul V. McNutt, WMC chief, and Lawrence Appley, deputy chairman and executive director, will address them.

Latest Totals Reported

Latest totals for each of the fund's four divisions follow:

Advance Gifts: $402,802.29, or 73 per cent of its quota; business and finance: $651,031.85, or 48.22 per cent; Government: $1,309,941.50, 60 per cent and, reports from the 19,000 volunteer house-to-house canvassers for the metropolitan division, show that in two days $15,629.71 has been donated in Washington, $3,590.30 in Montgomery County, and $2,102.50 in Prince Georges County.

The second combined report of the fund's four divisions will be made Monday in the United States Chamber "Hall of Flags." Similar report meetings will be held on Wednesday and Friday, October 27 and 29.

Suspension Of Steuart Firm Asked

OPA Attorney Sees No Room in D. C. For Oil Dealer And Rationing

Attorneys for the District OPA recommended yesterday that L. P. Steuart & Bro., Inc., one of Washington's largest oil dealers, be suspended from operation until December 31, 1944, as oral arguments in the administrative hearing were concluded in the Municipal Court Building.

The case was taken under advisement by OPA Hearing Commissioner Clifford Snyder. The Steuart firm is accused of 223 OPA violations in the distribution of fuel oil last winter.

"There is no room for L. P. Steuart and rationing in Washington at the same time," said Carl W. Barueffy, chief enforcement attorney for the local OPA, in asking for the suspension.

In reply, Renah Camalier, Steuart's attorney, stated that OPA's case was caused by a "1943 whispering campaign," prejudice, bias and the statements of business rivals. He said that OPA should attempt to restore public confidence in the agency by other methods than taking hard-working businessmen to task.

Camalier criticized the OPA for recommending the stringent penalty, and said that the city would suffer should the Steuart firm be put out of business. He cited statements that Steuart was able to provide fuel for the city last winter when other dealers, "because they lacked foresight," could not do so.

City News In Brief

James Prather, 18, Negro, of 913 N st. nw., who appeared in Municipal Court yesterday under a charge of larceny of $47, told Judge Walter J. Casey:

"I lost $10 shooting craps and I spent the rest of the money foolishly. But it was all the devil's fault."

"Unfortunately, this court has no jurisdiction over the devil," remarked Judge Casey as he sentenced Prather to four months' imprisonment.

5 to Be Graduated

The B'nai Israel Hebrew School, 14th and Emerson sts. nw., will hold graduation ceremonies tomorrow at 2:30 o'clock with Dr. Pinchos Churgin, dean of the Teachers' Institute of the Yeshiva College of New York, delivering the principle address. Five boys who will be graduated are: David Samuel Bordenick, Donald Kaplan, Stanton Arnold Needleman, Stanley Ellis Rubenstein and Jay Wolf.

Chrysanthemum Show

The 16th annual chrysanthemum show of the Takoma Horticultural Club will be combined with an exhibit of fall vegetables Thursday and Friday at the Takoma Branch of the Public Library, Fifth and Cedar sts. nw., Frank S. Pohanka, president, announced yesterday.

Opening at 7:30 p. m. Thursday, the show hours will be open Friday from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. All amateur growers are eligible to enter in 48 classes for flowers and 15 for vegetables.

Those on the committee are Dr. C. S. Ross, chairman; J. Preston Swecker, vice chairman; W. H. Youngman, Dr. Roy Magruder, A. Sommerville, jr., Mrs. J. J. Sazama, Miss Isabelle Smith, Mrs. E. C. Powell, Dr. William Stuart, J. A. Becker, Mrs. A. K. Goodman, George U. Graff and H. A. Marmer. W. H. Parsons is in charge of exhibitions assisted by Dr. Furman L. Mulford.

Talk by Mrs. Poling

Mrs. Daniel A. Poling, wife of the president of the International Society of Christian Endeavor, will address the Christian Endeavor group of the Third Baptist Church tomorrow at 4 p. m.

Government Workers Respond Generously to Plasma Call

Government workers have responded generously to the recruitment of blood donors that was started Friday, October 15, among Government agencies under the direction of M. S. Szymczak, a governor of the Federal Reserve Board, it was announced yesterday by Lee D. Butler, chairman of the blood donor committee.

Butler explained that Szymczak had been appointed a vice chairman of the District blood donor committee of the American Red Cross to recruit Government workers over a long period of time instead of a limited campaign.

Cited as Typical Day

"The response of Federal workers at the blood donor center has been unusually good this week," Butler said. Explaining that the number of Government workers who had donated had not yet been totaled separately from other contributors, he cited yesterday's record as a typical day.

Records on Government donors yesterday follow: Federal Bureau of Investigation, 20 contributors; Bureau of Statistics, 22; Bureau of Aeronautics, 17; Adjutant General's Office, 13; Social Security Agency, 18; Navy Yard, 15.

"The Navy Yard is setting an excellent record at the Blood Donor Center," Butler said. "Every day from Monday through Friday, 15 workers come at 3:30 p. m."

As Birthday Celebration

Butler told the story of Miss Rosalie Cinalli, a clerical worker with the Veterans' Administration, who celebrated her 21st birthday on October 21, by contributing at the blood donor center, 51 Louisiana ave. n.w. The girl, a native of Newport, R. I., and one of a family of 10 children, said she would never forget the day because as she was contributing blood, the Duchess of Windsor passed by her table at the center.

Any person, including Government employes and workers in other occupations, who wants to donate blood is asked to call at the center and through each contribution help to save a serviceman's life.

Restoration Project

How an Old Chest Was Made to 'Look Like New,' Or Better

When this chest was found in one of the local antique shops it was a dilapidated piece of furniture wearing a heavy coat of dark brown paint which covered up the brass and wrought iron hardware.

The chest pictured on this page in its present reincarnation was found in the outdoor yard of one of Georgetown's antique shops. The day we saw it, it had been raining and moisture still clung to the molding of the top and dripped down over the chest's scarred front. A heavy coat of dark brown paint and the accumulated dirt of years obscured any claim to beauty it might have, except for its graceful proportions and the curving lines of the feet.

For $25, it was bought and carted away to the garage, where it sat in dejection while its restoration was planned.

By scratching through the paint, we found that the hardware was intact. The 6-inch-long key was of wrought iron, as was the lock it fitted, the massive handles at either end, and the long tapering hinges. The locks on the drawers turned out to be brass.

Well Constructed

The chest was sturdily built, the corners dove-tailed and the lid held together with wooden pegs. The drawers had suffered most. The bottoms were missing except for one plank and a rat hole marred the corner of one. Another and larger rat hole in the right corner at the back of the chest, had been covered with a rough piece of tin by some former owner, with assorted burns and gashes, were its faults. But we thought its good qualities outweighed its faults, so the reconstruction process was on its way.

We were even more impressed with its sturdy construction when the key was thoughtlessly tossed inside the chest—so it wouldn't be lost—and the lock turned out to be a spring lock. It was necessary to take the hinges loose at the back to get it open again.

First step in the restoration was to spray the whole chest inside and out with a good insecticide. Then came a thorough washing with soap and water. It was then ready for the first application of paint remover. The heavy coat of brown paint proved to have been a good preservative for the wood underneath it was in good condition. As cloth after cloth was used up wiping off the paint, it was noticed that other colors than brown were coming off too. From along the edge of the drawers and in the grooves at the ends and between the drawers came a hint of red paint. And after a good bit of work, light panels began to show up on the front and sides. The panels were clear enough to use in repainting but whatever decoration had been in them was lost.

Patching the Holes

The tin which covered the large rat hole had been taken off (we found it had been nailed on with old square shop-made nails) and the next step was to patch up its holes and scars. New molding replaced the battered edges of the drawers, new bottoms were fitted to them. We found several of the oldest type of finishing nails used by American cabinetmakers. Plastic wood filled up the gashes in the top and sides while the rat holes were mended by whittling pieces of wood to fit the squared up holes and putting them in place with wooden pegs and glue. The surfaces were then sandpapered smooth.

The whole outside of the chest was stained a shade darker than its natural pine color but the panels were left untouched. It was necessary to put a varnish stain on the top and feet to improve the surface.

Then came the problem of what decoration should be put in the panels. That there had been something there originally we were sure—but what had it been? We pondered this problem for days. Was it Dutch? No. Colonial? Probably. We made colored sketches and held them up in the panels to see what would be the effect.

Finally it was decided to put a cluster of grapes in each panel. From a sketched tracing paper design, the outline was outlined on the chest and painted in oils. The border of the panels was painted a neutral buff color and the whole panel antiqued with burnt umber which dulled the reds, purples and greens of the grape designs to a soft tone which blended well with the color of the wood.

The whole chest was oiled time after time with linseed oil, then rubbed down and waxed, sandpapered and waxed again until the surfaces gleamed with the dark polish of old wood.

Inside Decorated

By this time, the interior of the chest which had been only cleaned, suffered by contrast with the shining exterior. So we decided to paint it the same buff used in the panel borders. The magnificent hand-wrought hinges stood out against the buff color and then came the final inspiration. The theme of the grapes, used in the more subdued shades. Leaves and tendrils were carried out over the hinges. Here the design was done in outline. The whole interior, design and all, was rubbed down with burnt umber and waxed several times. We added a modern brace for the heavy lid and wondered what was the original purpose of the little drawer space at the left side of the chest.

From a $25 near wreck, the chest had been converted through the use of a good bit of elbow grease, into a really fine looking piece of furniture quite capable of competing with any modern piece and, in many cases, getting the better of the comparison.

New Umbrellas for Old

By Ruth Gregory

If your old umbrella has sprung a leak, if its covering is worn or faded, don't toss it on the scrap heap. If you have patience mixed in equal proportion with patriotism, you'll make a new cover for it, prettier than the old.

It doesn't take too much doing. Not if you're careful and use the right materials. The things you'll need to give new life to the old umbrella are paper to cut yourself a pattern, stout thread and needle, and smooth rayon fabric. The average-sized umbrella will only require about a yard of 39-inch material. Get a solid color or all-over print—so you won't run into matching difficulties when you sew up the sections. Smooth fabrics are best because crepy ones are apt to pucker when subjected to water.

Cutting the Pattern

Remove the old covering and cut out one section of it for your pattern—be sure you cut it exactly, allowing about ¼ inch for seams. Pin the section to a piece of newspaper or wrapping paper, then draw an outline of it with a pencil. Lay out your material, pinning the paper pattern to it, and cut as many sections as are required—usually 10 sections.

Cut either crosswise or lengthwise of the material, whichever way cuts to the best advantage. Cut two circles 3 inches in diameter and put a half-inch hole in the center—for the circle covering at the tip.

Sewing

Next, hem each section, folding one-quarter inch under and turning a quarter-inch hem (it's easier if you have a machine, but you can do the whole job by hand). After you've water-proofed each section (see below), you're ready to sew the sections together. Be sure to begin stitching at the hem edge of the sections. Once the sections are together, press so that the seam edges are all turned in the same direction, and place the new cover over the umbrella frame.

Sew a rib tip to each seam, sew firmly through the eye of the tip and tack each seam along the several ribs.

Water-Proofing

Take two pieces of wax paper, place your fabric between them and press with a hot iron. Put a piece of cloth between iron and wax paper so iron won't stick. Allow enough time for the wax to penetrate into the fabric. That's all there is to the water-proofing, and your new umbrella will shed water like the well-known duck's back.

Finishing Up

Put one of your 3-inch circles inside at the apex of the umbrella and stitch to each rib end. Take your second 3-inch circle, after having gathered the edge of it, and slip it over the ferrule part (the little tip end). If you've lost the old ferrule, an ordinary plastic thimble will do. Spread glue inside the ferrule and press it on tightly, holding it for a few minutes until the glue sets.

Make a new band for holding the umbrella in place when not in use. Use the same button and ring, and tack the band securely to rib tip.

You'll have done your bit toward easing the metal shortage and left one more umbrella on the store counters for a person who really needs a new one.

These are the things you'll need to give new life to the old umbrella: paper from which to cut a pattern, needle and thread, smooth rayon fabric.

Women's Club News

By Genevieve Reynolds

Worried about an Amazon army in the post war world? If so laugh away your groundless fears. For the girls in uniform are talking in terms of marriages and homes — not jobs or armies. This is the observation of Miss Rebecca Alica Sullivan, director of the Women's Division, National Catholic Community Services, USO Club at 1911 H st. nw., which is run jointly with the YWCA.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

"Servicemen are talking about jobs, business and a great post-war world," she said. "But not the girls. Mostly they are thinking of returning to civilian life, settling down and getting married."

Pretty Miss Sullivan, should know whereof she speaks, for she comes into daily contact with hundreds of men and women in uniform. Before coming to Washington last June she did volunteer work for the Soldier, Sailor, Marine Recreation Committee of the famous Buddie's Club in Boston.

A graduate of the Leland Powers School of the Theater in Boston, she taught dramatics privately, did much play directing with local Little Theater Groups; women's clubs etc. Also she was on faculty staff, School of Handicraft and Thereapy, in Boston.

By no means overlooking the uniformed men, Miss Sullivan, however, hopes to give the service women specialized services in the H st. USO Club. Handy for the girls will be manicure sets, shoe shine boxes, shower caps, irons for quick pressing. In fact, all the items needed for good grooming and home comforts. Also, she hopes to take care of girls on night duty by arranging afternoon bridge games and tea dances.

REBECCA SULLIVAN

In addition, she expects to arrange one or two nights of Red Cross work for the girls, such as sewing, knitting or bandage rolling. Miss Sullivan explained that the service girls are eager to do such work in their spare time. Then there will be handicrafts, language and art classes and perhaps Spanish for both boys and girls.

Chief innovation in the club program, proposed by Miss Sullivan, is the inauguration of a United Nations events. Recently the Chinese Embassy put on a Sunday afternoon program. Various other embassies will take over from time to time.

Did You Know That . . . ?

Scarcity of metals during this war is causing far less hardship and inconvenience than in former conflicts, according to Mrs. C. Edward Murray of Trenton, N. J., curator general of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Back in colonial days housewives turned their copper and pewter kitchen wares into the melting pot to aid in the war for freedom. They did not have plastic substitutes, nor were other metals available.

Now on exhibit in the DAR Museum are early American silver, pewter, brass, copper, tin, iron and steel objects. Miss Helen Johnson, secretary of the museum, gives gallery talks at 3 p. m. each Wednesday. The exhibition will continue until February 9.

Organize New Chapter

The teen-agers out Arlington way are leading their older brothers and sisters. At least they set a precedent this week when this age group met to organize a senior chapter, Children of the Confederacy. Membership of the senior chapter, Children of the Confederacy will consist of those young people of Confederate descent who are no longer members of the junior group and not yet eligible on account of age for the mother chapter, or Camp of Sons of the Confederacy. Mrs. Roy H. Ewers, will be in charge of the chapter.

Richard Lewis, was named president of the chapter and Harry Ewers, first vice president.

Others elected were: Miss Eve French, secretary; John Loflin, treasurer; Miss Kitty Waller, historian and Miss Lois Leatherwood, chairman of publicity on patriotic activities and civil defense.

Mary Haworth's Mail

appears every day except Saturday in the women's pages. Tomorrow, in Section IV, Miss Haworth discusses the problem of a girl whose widowed sister makes a joke of deliberately stealing her beaux.

SHOP AND RUN

Found!—A Make-It-Do Pattern

Yes, conservation talk is a good thing in wartime, but how many of us can turn an old black dress into a couturier's dream with just imagination and wishful thinking as tools?

It takes the sweat of your brow and time, but it can be done even by you who passed domestic science class by the skin of your teeth. And here's how. By not attempting to cut up a dress by guesswork and then expect the pieces to go back together like a jig saw. A good pattern is the secret of your success—and now some genius has cut one pattern that includes many different dress tops, sleeve patterns, belt, pocket, and collar patterns—all in one.

It's best to use new materials rather than cut up another garment for the contrasting set-ins. Carefully select the contrasting material, keeping the color and texture of the dress in mind. With this pattern you can better see what possibilities for make-over your clothes have; and if you're sewing your own clothes anyway, this is a fine pattern to own because it includes the many variations of basic dress construction.

Look at the possibilities!—

(Sketch a.) Remember the good black wool that you wear only when you're not going to take your coat off, because the top is uncomfortably tight? Here's what you could do with it—add an insert.

(Sketch b.) You were going to give that dress to the maid, rather reluctantly though because it was your favorite, but it was faded under the arms. Here's what you could do with it.

(Sketch c) A perfectly good dress turned from a wallflower in your closet to the most popular dress you own—just by changing a neckline that was never becoming to you!

(Sketch d.) Then there are dresses that you're tired of wearing, but they'd come in handy on those "what'll I wear" days. Change it with a color contrasting yoke, add a bow neckline, make a new belt (even if you have to steal the material from the hem), change the sleeves. All this is putting patriotism into action!

We've found the blueprint—for 35 cents. Work involved 'tis true, but you've got a new dress and who isn't proud to say, casually, "Just a little something I made over."

Citrus Fruit Supplies Are Increasing in Washington

Florida contributed one carload of oranges and another of grapefruit to the Washington wholesale market yesterday. An additional carload of oranges came in from California. Limes and lemons continue to be plentiful, which should help solve the citrus fruit problem. Tomatoes and sweet potatoes are still good quality and reasonable in price. Other fresh fruits and vegetables which the War Food Administration found available to retailers are listed below.

Plentiful—Green beans, white potatoes, sweet potatoes, squash, tomatoes, spinach, kale, collards, turnip greens, mustard greens, turnips, rutabaga, cauliflower, beets, onions, peppers, limes, lemons and Western grapes.

Moderate—Cabbage, carrots, parsnips, parsley, lettuce, broccoli, mushrooms, celery and avocados.

Cuban Envoy To Entertain Committee

The Cuban Ambassador, Dr. Aurelio Concheso, will entertain at luncheon today at the embassy in honor of the committee on International Intellectual Cooperation which is meeting in Washington. The committee will establish a cultural center to replace, for the emergency, the original organization, the International Institute of Intellectual Cooperation, created by the League of Nations twenty years ago, which had Paris.

The company will include Miguel Ossorio de Almeida of Brazil, chairman of the organization; James T. Shotwell, honorary chairman; Cosme de la Torriente of Cuba; Alfonso Reyes of Mexico; Victor Lascano of Argentina; Laurence A. Duggan, Waldo G. Leland, Dr. L. S. Rowe, Dr. John W. Studebaker, Archibald MacLeish, Charles A. Thomson, Julian Noguira, delegate from Uruguay; Mrs. Blanche Z. de Baralt, Antonio Castro Leal of Mexico; Mrs. Concha Romero James, Richard Pattee, Mariano Brull, of Cuba; Robert Valeur, Luis A. Baralt, Oscar Vera, of Chile; Herminio Rodriguez, secretary of the committee; Jose T. Baron, Minister-Counselor of the Cuban Embassy and Joaquin E. Meyer, First Secretary of the embassy.

A GALA EVENT of the past week was the United Nations Club fete Thursday evening at the Soviet Embassy. One of a series of such parties, it chalked up honors on a number of accounts. Among those present was the trio above—Wing Commander C. Boldero of the Royal Air Force, Olavo Rodrigues, and Miss Maria Frias of Brazil. Post Staff Photos

Miss Morris Chooses Date For Wedding

Invitations to the wedding of Miss Miriam Patricia Morris and Pvt. Kenneth Todd Young have been issued by the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Maurice Morris. The ceremony, to which only intimate friends of both families have been invited, will be a simple one and will take place next Saturday afternoon, October 30, at 5 o'clock in the choir of the Washington Cathedral. A large reception at the Morris home will follow the ceremony.

Miss Hillis Reid Morris, sister of the bride-elect, will be maid of honor and bridesmaids will include Mrs. Charles Willard Young, Miss Nancy Young, Miss Sylvia Brull and Miss Christine Brull.

Lieut. Charles Willard Young, USA, will be his brother's best man. Ushers will include Pvt. Hugh Ross Morris, USMCR, Capt. James Clifford Eaton, USA, Lieut. Calvin DeWitt Stillman, USA, Pvt. Edmund Randolph Biddle, USA, and Lincoln Gordon, Harold Chaska, Allan Schmier and Mervin Tobias.

Several parties honoring the bride-elect will take place next week.

Bolivian Envoy Host at Luncheon For Countrymen

The Bolivian Ambassador and Senora de Guachalla entertained at luncheon yesterday at the embassy in honor of Dr. Felix Veintenillas, special representative from Bolivia to the recent Sanitary Congress held in New York; and for Col. Donato Cardozo, director of railways of Bolivia, who was invited to this country by the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Defense.

Dr. Veintenillas is also Cultural Attache of the Bolivian Embassy. He came to this country at the invitation of the Pan American Sanitary Congress and with Colonel Cardozo is leaving shortly to return to Bolivia. A director of the Institute of Bacteriology of Bolivia, Dr. Veintenillas is also a professor at the medical school in La Paz. Colonel Cardozo has been making a tour of this country in the interest of the railway systems of Bolivia.

Mrs. Fries Is Hostess At Luncheon

Mrs. Amos A. Fries, wife of Maj. Gen. Fries, entertained at dinner last night at her home on Woodley rd. for a group of out-of-town guests.

Among the guests were Mrs. James A. Jones of Dallas, Mrs. R. F. Crump of Richmond, Mrs. Sanford G. Donaldson of Yankton, S. Dak.; Mrs. C. A. McAlister of Macon, Ga., Mrs. Delbert T. Robinson of Charleston, W. Va.; Mrs. William S. McCrea of Spokane, Wash.; Mrs. Charles Nelson of Nashville, and Mrs. Rufus O. Renfrew of Woodward, Okla.

Others there included Mrs. James Donn of Miami and Mrs. James W. Collins of Salt Lake City.

Justice Murphy Entertains Service Officers on Tour

With Mrs. Clark Woodward, lieutenant, American Womens Hospital Reserve Corps, as their sponsor, a group of 21 junior officers of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps, from Navy and Walter Reed Hospitals, were recent guests of Justice Frank Murphy at the Supreme Court. The seat of the highest tribunal in the land is one of the points of interest designated by the AWHRC's "ferry command" undertaking to give young American convalescent officers an intimate glimpse of "what makes the wheels go round" in the country they serve.

Justice Murphy received his guests in his chambers, took them for a personally conducted tour of his offices, where the chief objects of interest were two diplomas—one issued to the justice by the Armored Force School at Fort Knox, Ky., the other by special tactics branch of the Divisional Officers School at Fort Benning, Ga. A silver plaque, presented to Justice Murphy when he was Governor General of the Philippines and chief of the constabulary of the islands, was also on view.

"We have news that is not so good," he told the officers crowding around his desk in solemn listening mood. "The Japs have given the Philippines their independence. They made quite a ceremony of it—dressed up the occasion with all the pomp and circumstance of a great historical event. Ostensibly, they turned the Philippines over to the Filipinos, but when we remember Manchukuo and other Japanese puppet 'free' states we know how free the Philippines will be under Jap 'protection.' The danger lies in the fact that the younger generation of Filipinos now maturing may be tricked by this ostentation of freedom. Our urgent job is to get the Japs out of the Philippines—the sooner the safer for us."

Bidding "farewell and happy landings" to his guests before they were escorted to the trial room to sit in on a court session, Justice Murphy told them: "Gentlemen, there is only one job I'd trade mine for—that is the job you are doing." He directed that they be seated in what court habitues facetiously call the "royal pews" cushioned banquettes immediately to the left of the bench and reserved for distinguished visitors, with the remark, "I know of no one more worthy of occupying them."

Two young Marines, Lieut. H. S. Longabaugh and Pharmacist B. I. Tucker, their breasts covered with service ribbons awarded for participation in the various theaters of war, focused attention of the justices as they took their seats behind the bench. At once there was a huddle of judicial heads and much behind-hand whispering which a monitor confided later was a contest to see who could identify the most ribbons.

Following the court session Mrs. Byron took the officers and their escorts home for tea. Tomorrow evening Mrs. McCeney Werlich will entertain 20 officers from the Army and Navy hospitals for supper followed by an informal musical program, and Mrs. Edward T. Sotesbury will entertain a similar group next week for the AWHRC.

Sally de Butts Goodhue's Engagement To Army Officer Is Announced

OF INTEREST throughout northern Virginia is the engagement of Miss Sally de Butts Goodhue to Lieut. Theodore Huntington, United States Army, which has been made known by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Marion S. Goodhue of Baltimore. Lieutenant Huntington is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Huntington of Worcester, Mass.

Miss Goodhue is a graduate of Garrison Forest School in Maryland and studied at Johns Hopkins University. She made her debut at the Bachelors' Cotillion in Baltimore during the 1940 season. A well-known visitor in Virginia, she has many relatives in Fauquier County. Her mother, the former Miss Sarah Roszel, grew up in the "hunt country" and was one of Virginia's most excellent horsewomen. Miss Goodhue is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George A. Roszel of The Plains and is the niece of Samuel Stephen Roszel of Markham.

Lieutenant Huntington was graduated from New York University and had just begun a postgraduate course at Harvard University when he entered the Army.

No date has been set for the wdding, but it will take place in the late winter or early spring.

A gala birthday party of the past week was the one at which Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Wanner of Little Washington entertained in honor of Senator Aubrey Weaver.

The dinner took place at the Royal Hotel in Front Royal, Va., and was attended by 50 guests. A feature of the evening was the program of piano music provided by the Senator himself following dinner.

AMONG RECENT ARRIVALS in the hunt country are Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Phillips, jr., of Washington, who have recently been living at Lenox, Mass. Mr. Phillips is now in Washington, where he is campaign manager of the War Finance Division of the United States Treasury, and has leased a home in Middleburg for his family.

The Phillips family, including two sons, Brett and Robert B. Phillips 3d, took possession of their new home a few days ago and are busy getting settled. "Bob" Phillips, well known newspaper columnist and writer of magazine articles, has many friends in this section, where he was formerly a frequent visitor.

Mrs. George C. Marshall was the guest in whose honor Mrs. Robert Fletcher of Leesburg entertained at a tea this week.

Miss Janet Roszel of Baltimore has arrived in Virginia to visit her aunt, Miss Elizabeth Lemmon, at her home, Church House, in Middleburg. Miss Roszel will visit her cousin, Mrs. Southgate Morison at Redgate near Oatlands before returning to Baltimore.

Visiting friends in Middleburg this week was Capt. William E. Jones, who recently took over the management of the Cleremont estate near Richmond. Miss Stephane Jones, daughter of Captain and Mrs. Jones, has returned to Wellesley College for the winter there, while their other daughter, Miss Dorothy Jones, is continuing her studies at Hollins College.

MAJ. AND MRS. Johnston Hyde entertained at dinner a few evenings ago at the Red Fox Tavern. Major Hyde left later for Port Deposit, Md., where he has taken a Government position.

Lieut. Frank Henry Smith, U. S. Army, of New York has been the house guest of Miss Peggy Squires this week, at the home of her mother, Mrs. Johnston Hyde.

Purely Personal

Mr. Frederick Mitchell Gould has closed her Newport residence and will spend the winter season at her home in Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Nourse entertained at dinner last evening in their home on Jocelyn st. in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Grady. Their guests included Mr. and Mrs. Willis Peck, Mr. and Mrs. Parker Van Zandt and Capt. and Mrs. Earle T. Hobart. Mrs. Hobart, who is a sister of Mrs. Nourse, is the noted author, Alice Tisdale Hobart, author of "Oil for Lamps of China" and "The Cup and the Sword." Her husband has been recently assigned to Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Lisle Smith have as their house guest in their home in Spring Glade, Va., Mrs. Jack Martin of Dover, Del., who is the daughter of the former Senator and Mrs. James Hughes.

Mrs. Harold Singer has returned to her apartment at the Westchester after a visit with Captain Singer in Miami, Fla.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Michelson have visiting them in their home on Sixteenth st. their son, Pfc. Israel Michelson, USMC, who has just returned from 18 months duty in the Pacific. Private Michelson will soon go into Bethesda Hospital for treatment of his war injuries.

Mr. and Mrs. William Howard Taft 3d are in New York visiting Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wilson Bowers at the Carlyle.

Mrs. Martin Vogel will be hostess at a buffet supper and shower this evening in her home on Woodland dr. in honor of Miss Margheritta Stirling, whose engagement to Lieut. (j.g.) Robert Barit, USNR, was announced last week by her mother, Mrs. William Calhoun Stirling.

Friday Dances Opened Last Night At Sulgrave Club

Opening event in the fall dance season was the Sulgrave Club ball last evening, first in a series of five such fetes.

Timed to jibe with war schedules, the party last night started at 9 o'clock and ended promptly at 1, a far cry from similar peacetime festivities. The committee that has arranged the dances were in line to receive the guests. They were Mrs. Norman Clinton Keith, Mrs. John M. Cabot, Mrs. Reeve Lewis, jr., Miss Eleanor Flood and Miss Anne Boardman.

This series of dances first started last spring when three were arranged. The dates of the Friday dances to come are November 19, January 7, February 18 and April 14.

Adams-Roberts Rites Today In New York

At an afternoon ceremony today in St. James Church, New York, Miss Mary Whittington Roberts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tobias Lord Roberts of Bar Harbor, Me., will become the bride of Howard Crouse Adams. The Rev. Horace W. B. Donegan will officiate, and a ceremony will follow at 1130 Park ave., the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Daniel C. Adams.

Mr. Adams is connected with the War Department in the office of the Quartermaster General, and he and his bride will make their home here.

Miss Roberts will be given in marriage by her father, and Mr. Adams' brother, Capt. D. Nelson Adams of Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, will be best man.

Miss Roberts is a graduate of Dana Hall, Wellesley and the Wheelock School, Boston. She also studied at Boston University and at New York University. Her fiance is a graduate of the Hotchkiss School and Yale University.

Ruth Schenkle, Kenneth Baumann Are Married

St. Mark's Episcopal Church in San Antonio, Tex., was the scene last night of the wedding of Miss Ruth Schenkle and Aviation Cadet Kenneth Baumann, both of Chevy Chase.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick G. Schenkle and Cadet Baumann is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis A. Baumann.

Mr. Schenkle gave his daughter in marriage. She was attired in a gown of white satin, designed with circular train, long sleeves and tight bodice trimmed in a design of seed pearls. Her train-length veil was held with a coronet of pearls and she carried a bouquet of white roses.

Maid of honor to the bride was Miss Carralin Sue Baumann, and Mr. Baumann served his son as best man. A small reception took place following the ceremony.

The bride attended American University and Cedar Crest College, where she was a member of Pi Omega Phi Sorority.

Wickards Hosts to Indiana Friends At Informal Fete

The Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Claude Wickard entertained at an informal "Hoosier dinner party" last evening in their Westchester Apartment.

The occasion for the fete was the arrival of Mrs. Harvey O. Schmitt and Mrs. Earl Ray of Logansport, Ind., to spend about 10 days with the Wickards. Logansport is Mrs. Wickard's hometown, so that much of the dinner conversation had a Hoosier emphasis.

The visitors will leave the end of next week for New York, and Mrs. Wickard is hoping to accompany them there. The Secretary of Agriculture will leave today for Chicago, where he is scheduled to deliver a speech. He will return to the Capital on Thursday.

Dr. Hector Castro Is Luncheon Host

The Ambassador of El Salvador, Dr. Hector David Castro, entertained at luncheon Thursday at the Mayflower, honoring Mario Sol, president of social welfare in El Salvador.

Dr. Jose Aviles, Christian Ravndall, John D. Tomlinson, Gerald Foley, Rene May and Dr. Felipe Vega-Gomez were other guests.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

THE DIPLOMATIC grapevine reports that inter-Allied relations with Russia are going pretty well now. This is certainly true on the surface, and while some irritations have occurred below the surface, both sides have to show a real tendency to try to get along.

Most serious subsurface irritation was over the Mediterranean Council, through which Russia, the United States and Britain were to confer regarding Italy, North Africa and the Balkans.

The Russians took the Mediterranean Council seriously and appointed as their representative Andrei Vishinski, the famous prosecutor in the Russian purge trials. This was the equivalent of sending the most outstanding member of the U. S. Supreme Court or the leading lawyer of England.

Vishinski is a man of national stature, capable of making Mediterranean decisions without consulting Moscow. But to represent the United States on the Mediterranean Council, Secretary Hull sent Ed Wilson, U. S. Ambassador to Panama. Wilson is a thorough-going, competent diplomat who can handle any routine job and handle it well. But almost no one outside diplomacy or Panama has heard of him. He has no national stature and he cannot act on his own.

Immediately it developed that Wilson was to act as a glorified messenger and report everything back to Washington. The British representative was to do the same. In other words, Churchill and Roosevelt were to make the decisions, and the much publicized Mediterranean Council was to be a mere reporting agency.

This immediately roused Russian wrath. They had welcomed the council, appointed a top man. So for a moment they considered withdrawing. However, for the sake of Allied harmony, they stayed on and are giving the Mediterranean Council a trial.

Poor 'Pa' Watson

Toughest job White House secretary Maj. Gen. Edwin ("Pa") Watson of the White House secretariat has to tackle each day is keeping the President's appointment schedule on time.

Frequently FDR will sit talking to an old friend for 15 or 20 minutes over the allotted time, and that snarls the White House schedule for the rest of the day.

This is hard on the general's nervous system, especially when bigwigs from the War or Navy Departments are waiting to discuss military matters. On such occasions Watson is not above barging in and breaking up the conference.

The other day when the President's old friend, Governor Bob Kerr of Oklahoma, was over-staying his time—through no fault of his own—Watson walked in and began to parade nervously about the room.

Roosevelt laughingly motioned Watson to a chair.

"Sit down and talk to us for awhile," General," he said. "We're having a very interesting conversation."

With a sigh, Watson took a chair.

Spending Fight

THE DRIVE to pare Federal expenditures has reached crusading dimensions on Capitol Hill since the five Senate globe-trotters returned from the battle fronts with some disquieting tales about lend-lease largesse.

However, when the matter was discussed behind closed doors by the Senate Appropriations Committee, there were repercussions more like a riot than a crusade.

Septuagenarian Senators Kenneth Kellar, Tennessee Democrat, and Clyde M. Reed, Kansas Republican, tangled in a bare-knuckled argument over how much money the committee should spend for "exports" to study war and domestic spending.

McKellar said $30,000 was enough and was all set to put to a vote a motion calling for this amount when Reed demanded a chance to be heard. The forthright Kansas newspaper publisher contended that $30,000 was only a "flybite," that at least $300,000 was needed to do a thorough job of investigating "Administration extravagance."

"You're tackling something with a tack-hammer that ought to be hit with a sledge-hammer," Reed argued, waving his finger at the Senator from Tennessee.

When McKellar, who was presiding in the absence of Chairman Carter Glass, started to reply, the Gentleman from Kansas cut him short. With a gesture embracing all Democrats on the opposite side of the table, Reed exploded:

"I'm fed up with the attitude of this committee when it comes to protecting the taxpayers' interest. You're all wet."

"I won't have you casting reflections on this committee," erupted McKellar, who is almost as anti-New Deal as Reed, though he still flies the Democratic label. The Tennesseean added a few colorful after-thoughts which caused Reed to rush up to the table, demanding an apology. After a glaring bout, the two Senators were finally placated by colleagues.

More Rum Running?

THE LIQUOR industry is shaking a warning finger at Henry Morgenthau. "If you increase that excise tax on imported alcohol," it says, "we'll have rum running on a scale we never dreamed of."

What they fear is rum running from Cuba and Mexico. Today the tariff plus excise tax on alcohol from Cuba is $8 a gallon of "190 proof." Reduced to 100 proof, the alcohol carries a tax of $15.20 a gallon. So if you can bring it in without paying the tax, you have a handsome profit.

From Havana to Miami is only an overnight voyage, and a small sailing schooner can bring in a cargo of alcohol large enough to make a small fortune in one haul. Even easier is the importation across the Mexican border, more than a thousand miles long.

Treasury Department proposes to increase the excise tax still further, thus increasing the temptation to rum running.

Transport Workers Declare for Roosevelt

New York, Oct. 22 (AP).—The annual convention of the CIO Transport Workers of America urged in a resolution today that President Roosevelt be reelected in 1944 "in order that our Nation may have his services" during the war and "in a democratic world" afterward.

The union claims a membership of more than 80,000.

Other resolutions called for defeat of sales tax efforts in Congress, repeal of the victory tax, the raising of income tax exemptions for low-salaried workers and an increase in corporation income taxes.

Capital Store Sales Up 17% During Week

By S. Oliver Goodman

Despite the absence of usual fall clearance sales, Washington department store sales in the week ended October 16 were 17 per cent heavier than in the same week last year.

For the four weeks ended October 16, local stores' volume was 8 per cent larger than in the same 1942 period, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday.

The entire Fifth Reserve District showed a sales gain of 18 per cent for the week and 7 per cent for the four-week period. Factors in the continued gains were favorable weather and a movement toward early holiday buying.

Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., in its latest weekly trade review said: "As heavy consumer buying continues, retailers are finding it more difficult to set aside any portion of their inventories for the coming holiday (Christmas and Thanksgiving) trade . . ."

Utility Aides to Speak

Four local utility officials will discuss "The Impact of Wars on Public Utilities" at a meeting Tuesday night of the District of Columbia Control at the Carlton Hotel.

The officials will be J. E. Hebeler of Capital Transit Co., H. G. Haydon of Potomac Electric Power Co., F. H. Kenworthy of Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. and O. H. Ritenour of Washington Gas Light Co.

TWA Elects Miss Black

New assistant secretary of Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., is Miss Myra Black of 7133 7th st. nw. Miss Black was elected to the post at the last meeting of the board of directors and will remain in the Washington office, her headquarters for the last 12 years.

Born on a farm near Belmont, N. Y., Miss Black's first job after graduation from William Smith College, Geneva, N. Y., was with the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce in Washington. Five years later she left this to do secretarial work for TWA and has been with the airline ever since. She is one of the few women who can boast of a 17-year career in aviation.

Simple Tax Law Urged

So you had trouble with your income tax form—well, even the experts must have shuddered a bit for the American Institute of Accounts urged yesterday that Congress set up a commission to "write a simple revenue law which will express a permanent and consistent policy of Federal taxation."

The call for help by the institute declared its members believe annual revisions of tax laws "have resulted in the creation of a very complex tax structure which is highly detrimental to the prosperity of the country."

Changes, the institute said in a resolution, are required "to give taxpayers the necessary confidence to face the future."

Safeway Sales Dip

Sales of Safeway Stores for the four weeks ended October 9 amounted to $47,057,369, and compared with $47,770,049 for the four weeks ended October 10, 1942, a decrease of 1.49 per cent. For the 40 weeks ended October 9, sales aggregated $450,285,246, and compared with sales of $461,234,911 for the same 1942 period, a decrease of 2.59 per cent.

There were 2481 stores in operation as of October 9, as compared with 2623 a year earlier.

Rockefeller Stock Sale Postponed

New York, Oct. 22 (AP).—Dillon, Read & Co. announced today the proposed sale of a block of 1,000,000 shares of common stocks of the various Standard Oil companies for John D. Rockefeller, jr. had been postponed from next Monday.

The first announcement said Rockefeller would increase his holdings of United States Government bonds with proceeds from the sale of the oil stocks.

Postal Telegraph Heads Join Western Union

New York, Oct. 22 (AP).—Albert N. Williams, president of Western Union Telegraph Co. today announced the appointment of William J. Deegan, formerly president of Postal Telegraph, as vice president of Western Union.

Walter P. Marshall, former executive vice president of Postal, was appointed assistant to Williams. Postal Telegraph was recently purchased by Western Union and merged into the latter.

World Order Mission to Be Here Nov. 9

A city-wide youth rally arranged by the Washington Federation of Christian Youth will be among the features of the Washington phase of the Christian Mission on World Order, November 9.

The youth rally will be held at 8 p. m. at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, while other sessions will take place at Calvary Baptist and First Congregational Churches. Additional programs are being planned for 21 high schools and 4 colleges.

The molding of public opinion for a just and durable peace will be the purpose of the Washington mission and similar projects in 100 major cities from November 1 to 20. The local mission is being sponsored by the Washington Federation of Churches and the Washington Council of Church Women.

The visiting "team" of speakers will include Henry Sweet of the International Council of Religious Education; Mrs. Samuel McCrea Cavert, wife of the executive secretary of the Federal Council of Churches; the Rev. Ewart Turner, former pastor of the American Church in Berlin; Dr. Henry Hitt Crane, pastor of Detroit's Central Methodist Church, and Dr. Walter H. Judd, representative from Minnesota and once medical missionary to China.

Christmas Carol Will Be Recorded For Servicemen

The young people of River Road United Presbyterian Church, 45th st., River rd. and Fessenden st. nw., tomorrow at 6:45 p. m. will sponsor a "Christmas in October" service.

With WAVES and sailors from the Bethesda Naval Center as guests, the youths will make recordings of "Silent Night," which will be sent with gifts to the church's men in the service. Christmas carols will be sung. The Rev. Virgil M. Cosby will speak tomorrow at 11 a. m. on "The Love of the Spirit."

Pastor Is Ordained

The Rev. Kenneth C. Buker, pastor of Cheverly, Md., Christian Church, this week was ordained formally as a minister of the Disciples of Christ churches.

Chief Navy Chaplain Speaks For Organization Like Army's

Capt. Robert D. Workman, Navy chief of chaplains yesterday deplored the fact that the Navy chaplains' organization is not on a par administratively, with the Army Chaplains Corps.

Addressing a luncheon where a citation was presented Army Air Corps Chaplain William C. Taggert for coauthorship of the book, "My Fighting Congregation," Captain Workman expressed "great regret that we do not have an organization comparable to the Army." He explained that while the Army Chaplains Corps is a separate unit of the War Department, the Navy chaplains' organization functions under the Naval Bureau of Personnel.

The General Commission on Army and Navy Chaplains and leaders of Catholic, Protestant and Jewish faiths for some time have been agitating for passage of bills S. 2916 and H. 7838 which authorize a Navy Chaplains Corps with a Chief of Chaplains, giving the chief a temporary rank of rear admiral. Sponsors of the bills are Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat) of Massachusetts, a Catholic, and Representative Charles A. Plumley (Republican) of Vermont, a Protestant.

After Captain Workman's remarks and an earlier message from Brig. Gen. William R. Arnold, Army Chief of Chaplains, a citation was given Chaplain Taggert on behalf of the National Conference of Christians and Jews by Dr. Andrew W. Gottschall, director of the conference's program for the armed forces.

The citation read in part:

"In recognition of the chaplains' devotion to the spirtual needs of the men in the service and in appreciation of their salutary work with the full awareness of their readiness at all times to minister to men of creeds other than their own."

As the citation was read, Chaplain Taggert, of the Baptist faith, stood at the head table with Christopher Cross, coauthor of the book, first book to appear by a front line chaplain. Taggert formerly pastor of the Baptist Church in Wichita Falls, Tex., served with the Nineteenth Bombardment Group in the southeast Pacific and was decorated for bravery May 2, 1943.

Several fellow Baptists who knew Chaplain Taggert in the South and who are participating in the city-wide Baptist revival were at the Willard luncheon. They were Kearnie Keegan of Longview, Tex.; B. B. McKinney, music editor of the Southern Baptist Sunday School Board, and the Rev. Luther J. Holcomb, pastor of Luther Rice Memorial Baptist Church here. Chaplain Taggert made a surprise visit to Luther Rice Church Thursday evening, and spoke informally. He and Holcomb are close friends.

Dr. Ernest A. Griffith presided at the luncheon in the absence of Dr. Paul F. Douglass, president of American University and chairman of the Washington Roundtable of the National Conference of Christians and Jews. Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, Senate chaplain and Foundry Methodist pastor, gave the invocation.

St. Jude Novena Is Held Nightly

The novena in honor of St. Jude is being conducted each evening in the Church of the Immaculate Conception, 8th and N sts. nw., at 7:45 p. m. Services consist of novena prayers, sermons and benediction. Father Winfrid McDermott, noted Passionist preacher, speaks each evening. The novena will be solemnly closed Thursday, October 28, the feast of St. Jude, at 7:45 p. m.

Forty Hours' Devotion will begin in the same church tomorrow at 12:15 Noon Mass. The celebrant will be the Rev. Joseph P. Bradley.

The music will be sung by the choristers under the direction of Mr. Charles A. Benson. Prof. Harry Wheaton Howard will accompany them on the organ and Mr. Prospero Miraglia on the harp.

Eureka Jubilee Singers Will Appear

The famous Eureka Jubilee Singers will appear at the National Tabernacle, 6440 Piney Branch rd. nw., at Georgia ave., tomorrow at 11 a. m., 3 p. m. and 8 p. m. and every night next week at 8 p. m. They have been featured on the National Broadcasting Co. and the Columbia Broadcasting System radio networks.

They will be presented in a program of Negro spirituals, plantation melodies and songs of the Deep South at every service, and will appear in costume.

The speaker at services tomorrow will be the Rev. James A. Stewart, noted Scottish evangelist, founder and director of the European Evangelistic Crusade, and associate editor of the Christian Digest. His subjects will be: 11 a. m., "The Gospel of the Holy Ghost"; 3 p. m. at the mass meeting, "The Truth about Religion and Red Russia," and "I Saw Hitler Invade Czechoslovakia."

Rep. Judd Will Speak At Chinese Church

Representative Walter H. Judd of Minnesota, former medical missionary to China, will speak tomorrow at 3 p. m. at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church at services marking the eighth anniversary of the founding of the Chinese Community Church and of the Rev. C. C. Hung's ministry. Dr. Liu Chieh, minister-counsellor of the Chinese Embassy, will bring greetings.

Dr. Diffendorfer Will Address Rally

The Autumn rally of the Methodist Union will be held Wednesday at 8 p. m., at the Francis Asbury Methodist Church. Dr. Ralph E. Diffendorfer, executive secretary of the Division of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Church, will speak on "We Prepare to Return."

It was Dr. Diffendorfer who, in 1941, advised the Methodist Board of Missions to withdraw temporarily all its missionaries from Japan, Korea, and occupied China—foreseeing that clashes with Japan seemed inevitable and that satisfactory mission work could not be carried on there under international tensions.

At that time he had just returned from an extended visit to Japan and from conversations with religious, social, and economic leaders there. This advice was followed and some 190 Methodist missionaries, including physicians, nurses, teachers, preachers, were sent to places of safety before Japan attacked American territory and interned other American citizens.

Sunday School Group Elects Dr. C. P. Clark

Dr. Clifton P. Clark, general superintendent of the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church Sunday School, has been elected new president of the D. C. Sunday School Association, succeeding the late Dr. Charles E. Resser, it was announced last night.

Religion in the News And News in Religion

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

Congress' failure to lift the exclusion ban of 1924 will "forge a powerful propaganda weapon in the hands of the Japanese" believes the Rev. Edmund J. Lee, for 25 years Episcopal missionary to China.

JUDD

Mr. Lee, now rector of Chatham Hall, Va. is a friend of Dr. Walter H. Judd (Republican), a Representative from Minnesota and former medical missionary to China, who this week presented to the House a petition signed by 800 churchmen and educators, urging modification of the immigration and naturalization laws with respect to China.

Denmark's resistance to the most recent acts of Nazi terror was commented on today by American religious leaders in statements given out by the Danish Information Service, New York, N. Y.

The Rev. Dr. P. O. Bersell, president of the Augustana Synod, Minneapolis, Minnesota, said:

"The Augustana Synod is shocked at the German barbarism in persecuting the Jews of Denmark, but is happy over the firm stand taken by Sweden in protest against this cruelty and Sweden's offer of refuge to the persecuted Jews.

The Rev. Dr. Samuel McCrea Cavert, general secretary of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, member of the Provisional Committee of the World Council of Churches, prominent Presbyterian and member of the board of the Union Theological Seminary of New York City, issued the following statement:

MERKER

"Leaders in the American churches have been thrilled by the news that the Danish church has refused to be cowed into silence in the face of the Nazi attack upon the Jews in Denmark.

"American churchmen also gratefully recognize the high significance of the generous Swedish offer to provide asylum for the Danish Jews who are now threatened with virtual slavery and death. America has never doubted the Christian spirit of Denmark would equal that of Norway.

* * * *

Of particular interest to Washington and nearby Presbyterians was the recent appointment of the Rev. Ralph K. Merker as director of missions for the Washington City Presbytery.

SMITH

Mr. Merker, former pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Erie, Pa., has offices in the Federation of Churches' Building, 1751 N st. nw. His position involves administration of allocated funds from the Presbyterian mission board for starting religious work in new areas and assisting struggling rural parishes.

He is now making a study of the area known as "lower Congress Heights," where a new Presbyterian congregation may be started in the near future.

* * * *

The Rev. Elwyn A. Smith has been named university pastor for the Westminister Foundation for the National Capital area, a project which sponsors spiritual and fellowship work among Presbyterian collegiates in this section.

According to the Rev. Mr. Smith, the purpose of the foundation is "to cultivate friendships with all the Presbyterian young people in the District's universities and the University of Maryland in the hope of bringing them first into a deeper experience of Christian faith and life, into a fuller and more Christ-like fellowship with each other, and into a position where we hope their Christian influence may be felt in campus life."

LELAND

Mr. Smith, who has offices in the Western Presbyterian Church at 1906 H st. nw., holds M. A. and Ph. D. degrees from Harvard University in the history and philosophy of religion, and a B. D. from Yale University. He is an ordained Presbyterian minister and a member of Washington City Presbytery.

Members of Metropolitan Presbyterian Church, on October 29, at 8 p. m., will greet as guest preacher Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, pastor of New York City's Marble Collegiate Church and internationally known churchman. The meeting will be sponsored by the Institute of Applied Religion and Psychology, of which Dr. J. Lowery Fendrich, pastor, is dean. The Rev. W. E. Leland has been named new assistant pastor of Metropolitan Presbyterian Church.

Soldier Shows Religious Art Tomorrow

Pfc. Benn Lewis, chaplain's assistant at Fort Myer, and the "Rembrandt" of the Army, will exhibet one of his best-known paintings, entitled "In Defense of Man," tomorrow at 8 p. m., at the Universal School of Truth, 1727 H st. nw.

The painting depicts a soldier kneeling in the heat of battle before the figure of Christ. The soldier is represented as a protector of his country and fellowmen, and Christ as the protector of the soldier who has answered the call of God and country.

Private Lewis was honored at the chaplains' exhibit of the recent "Back the Attack" war show for his painting of Army chaplain subjects, particularly the one, "Greater Love Hath No Man That This," which portrays the supreme sacrifice of four chaplains of three faiths.

Private Lewis' painting being exhibited Sunday temporarily reposes in his studio at Forty Myer and will eventually hang in a permanent chaplains' exhibit in the Office of Chief of Chaplains.

Soldiers of three faiths posed for the painting. They were Pvt. Sam Peskin, New York, Jewish, who posed for Christ's face; Pvt. John Renkas of Lackawanna, N. Y., Catholic, the hands, and Pvt. Thomas Hulen, Protestant, Sturgeon, Miss., and John Shurlock, Summit, N. Y., Catholic. The latter two men posed for a composite picture of the soldier, representing typical American youth.

Mrs. Virginia Neuhausel will present Private Lewis.

Old Wedding Reenacted Here

As a feature of the pageant, "Ryland's First Hundred Years," this week at Ryland Methodist Church, Branch and Pennsylvania ave. se., the wedding of the former Cora Walker and the Rev. Frank Hayes 60 years ago was reenacted. Left to right are Evelyn Bethke as Cora Walker; Mrs. Cora Walker Hayes, who returned to the church to see the reenactment, and David Newhouse as the Rev. Mr. Hayes. The actual wedding took place in the old Ryland Church at 10th and D sts. sw.

Regional Sodality Secretary Named

The Rev. John C. Baker, S. J., St. Ignatius Parish, Baltimore, Md., has been named regional secretary of the Sodality for Maryland, North Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia, Western New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware and the District of Columbia, it was announced at the Queen's Work here, Sodality central office of the United States and Canada. The appointment followed the recent realignment of the Maryland Province of the Society of Jesus.

Father Baker was born in Detroit, July 22, 1909, entered the Society of Jesus at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., August 14, 1928, and was ordained June 20, 1941.

Baptist Clerics And Laymen To Visit Homes

Laymen and clergy of 30 Baptist congregations will make home visitations tomorrow afternoon, as the second week of the city-wide Baptist evangelistic drive gets under way.

Visiting evangelists from 12 States will speak at various programs in the cooperating churches tomorrow and nightly next week. There will be special events in Sunday schools, youth groups, worship services and other activities.

"Washington for Christ" is the motto of the drive, which has drawn more than 40,000 persons into special services since the campaign began last Sunday.

The Rev. James P. Rodgers, chairman of the local steering committee and pastor of Petworth Baptist Church, anticipates that attendance will be doubled at the simultaneous evangelistic services tomorrow and in the coming week. The drive is slated to continue until October 31.

Bishop of Cuba Will Preach At Epiphany

The Right Rev. Alexander Hugo Blankingship, Bishop of Cuba, will preach tomorrow at 11 a. m. at Epiphany Episcopal Church.

He was born in Richmond, Va., and graduated from the University of Richmond. He attended the Yale Divinity School and later graduated from the Virginia Theological Seminary in the class of 1924. He received the degree of Doctor of Divinity from both the Virginia Theological Seminary and the University of Richmond.

Bishop Blankingship was rector of Emmanuel Church, Braddock Heights, Alexandria, and in 1927 became dean of the Cathedral in Havana, Cuba. In 1938 he was elected Bishop of Cuba. Bishop Blankingship in his college days was a noted athlete and is well known throughout the whole United States as one of the outstanding preachers in the country.

Holy Communion will be celebrated at 8 a. m. The preacher at 8 p. m. will be the Rev. Hunter M. Lewis, associate minister of the Church of the Epiphany, whose topic will be "The Temptations of the Modern World."

Famous Stones Will Be Shown At Cathedral

Six famous stones given to Washington Cathedral in the past will be on display Tuesday from 7 to 8:30 p. m., when the cathedral is open for warworkers and others unable to visit it during the day. They will be mounted in the south crypt corridor. A tour of the building begins at 7 p. m. and from 7:45 to 8:30 p. m. there will be music on the great organ.

Included in the stone display is one from the Apian Way, presented anonymously from the Court in the Palatine where St. Paul is known to have been tried before his martyrdom. The Hilde stone is from Whitby Abbey, England, and presented by Sir Charles Strickland through the Rev. A. R. Loxley.

There is a stone from an ancient Jewish synagogue in Kaifeng Honan, China. It is carved in the form of the Manna Pot, one of the favored forms of symbolic decoration of the old synagogues. It was presented by the Right Rev. William C. White, Bishop of Honan, through the Rev. S. Harrington Littell. The Aloha stone is from the Church Schools of Hawaii.

Bishop Lauds Ryland's Spirit Of Fellowship

Bishop Hughes, 77-year-old Washington Methodist resident prelate, spoke in a gayly-decorated church hall at Branch and Pennsylvania ave se., the new location for the congregation which for 96 years worshiped at 10th and D sts. sw.

Expressing regret that the old custom of addressing each other as "brother" and "sister" had almost disappeared, Bishop Hughes said that the Christian church was the real custodian of genuine fellowship and brotherhood. Such things, he said, had kept such a congregation as Ryland together for a century.

Later in his address, in a further plea for fellowship, the white-thatched bishop said that church officials who are so "childish" as to walk out on meetings when things do not go to suit them should be "given a bib and nursing bottle."

Dr. Horace E. Cromer, superintendent of the East Washington Methodist District, was among the guests. He also will address the centennial services tomorrow at 11 a. m. The Rev. Karl G. Newell, pastor, presided.

WFA Reports

Sufficient Turkey for Civilians

With an estimated 485,000,000 pounds of turkey meat available for market this year, there apparently will be an ample civilian supply for Thanksgiving Day, despite the purchase of 35,000,000 pounds demanded by the Army, it was reported yesterday by the War Foods Administration.

The armed services have not quite secured all of their needs in live birds or commitments and the Government order banning sales to civilians has not yet been lifted.

12 Million Pounds to Army

Despite the enormous supply of turkeys available, the sales to the armed services have been slower than anticipated, partly because of efforts of turkey raisers to obtain higher ceiling prices and partly because of the unequal distribution of processing plants to handle the birds.

Nonetheless the Army already has secured the 12 million pounds of turkeys estimated as the need for feeding Yanks overseas the traditional Thanksgiving dinner.

Ban to Be Lifted

The remainder of the Army purchases will be used in this country and this quota of from 20 to 25 million pounds has nearly been reached.

Until this quota is filled it is not possible to disclose when the ban on civilian sales will be lifted. However, a spokesman for the WFA vouchsafed the opinion it would be rescinded in time for Mr. and Mrs. America to eat their holiday bird.

Ration Book Task Handled With Dispatch

The smoothly-geared distribution in Washington of close to 800,000 copies of War Ration Book 4, completed here yesterday, owes its efficiency to three men in the District public school system, and from them, they insist, right down to thou ands of school department heads, principals, teachers and even pupils.

The latter two, working with volunte.rs, issued on Thursday, 378,238 copies of the latest food allotment book, of which white schools accounted for 250,229 and Negro schools 128,089. Tabulations for y.sterday, incomplete last night, indicated that some 400,000 were issued yesterday.

The system, devised a year ago last May, when OPA first called on the schools to help in the tremendous task of bringing District residents under the food allotment program, was organized by Dr. L. J. Cantrell, assistant superintendent of schools, Dr. G. C. Wilkinson, first assistant superintendent in charge of Negro schools, and Boise L. Bristor, school statistician.

Since that date, when Ration Book One, containing sugar, coffee and shoe coupons, was issued, the system has been called upon six times—once again for rationing of sugar to commercial firms, twice for gas, once for tires, when Book Two was issued in February of this year, and, on Thursday and yesterday, for Book Four. Book Three was distributed by OPA through the mails.

Evidence of its workability is the fact that out of 1,200,000 copies of the last book given to the schools for distribution, only 17 were lost—and these were stolen one night from one of the high schools.

The idea behind the scheme is simple enough: Two weeks before distribution started, principals of all 174 District public schools were called in a meeting with Drs. Cantrell and Wilkinson and Statistician Bristor.

The entire procedure—originally submitted by national OPA in the long, involved form most Government documents take—was first condensed and simplified by the three and explained and taught to the school heads. They, in turn, passed on the procedure to their staffs of teachers, totalling 3500, who then carefully instructed students chosen to help.

Floor plans for simplified application and distribution setups were suggested, and by the time Thursday rolled around, with queues of more than 378,000 Washington householders, Government workers, and others, each registrant knew precisely what to do as quickly as possible.

At the same time, in order to save the precious time of key war agency employes and relieve the strain on registrants, department heads at the Board of Education were taught the same routine. It was this group which in the past two days visited the White House, the two Houses of Congress, Supreme Court, War and Navy Departments and other vital agencies, to register and distribute some 8000 books "on the spot."

Persons who failed to register on either of two designated days must now wait until November 1, when they may apply—with War Ration Book 3—at their local Ration Boards for the new issue.

84 D. C. Men To Report for Duty Monday

Eighty-four Washington men, 75 of them Negroes, will report for duty with the armed services Monday, District Selective Service headquarters announced yesterday.

Parran Sees New Methods Of Health Care

Postwar expansion of community medical centers and close cooperation between the centers and hospitals was recommended by Dr. Thomas W. Parran, Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service, yesterday, at the closing session of the two-day conference of the Maryland-District Hospital Association.

The public health centers will operate as clinics for diagnosis and treatment of tuberculosis and venereal diseases, and will furnish prenatal and postnatal care to mothers, he said.

Connected With Hospitals

"These centers will be operated," Parran said, "by municipal and county authorities and will be connected with hospitals." "Association between them and major medical teaching centers," he said, "would allow for the referral of serious surgical cases to specialists."

An expected increase in the demand for hospitalization after the war was cited by the Surgeon General as the chief reason for neighborhood medical centers.

Persons are "getting into the habit" of seeking hospitalization rather than obtaining medical attention at home, Parran declared.

New Demands by Patients

"The wartime shortage of doctors has sent many mothers to hospitals to have babies, for instance," said Parran. "These women had their children at home before. They never will be satisfied with less than hospital accommodations in the future."

Dr. Parran revealed that the U. S. Cadet Nurse Corps training program has been met. School facilities for nurse training must be increased at least 20 per cent more, however, he said.

More than 86,000 students already are enrolled in the Cadet Nurse Corps, he said. Of the 1255 nursing schools eligible for nurse training, 1017 have made application for Bolten Act funds, and 884 schools have been approved. Expenditures amount to 45 million dollars.

Washington has six schools enrolled and Maryland has 13, Parran said, with a total enrollment of 2322. The local schools are St. Elizabeths, Providence Hospital, Georgetown Hospital, Freedman's, Sibley and Garfield.

Howard U. to Hear Vassar Chaplain

Dean Howard Thurman announced yesterday that Dr. C. Victor Brown, chaplain of Vassar College and the minister of the Vassar Community Church, will be the guest preacher tomorrow at 11 a. m. in the Andrew Rankin Memorial Chapel, Howard University. This marks Dr. Brown's initial visit to the campus. He has established himself as a challenging thinker, a deeply spiritual minded leader, and an understanding friend of young people.

Also tomorrow at 6:30 p. m. the Andrew Rankin Memorial Chapel will present its first Twilight Hour for the present quarter. This is a part of the Worship Through Art Series. The service consists of an evening with some of the greatest passages from the Bible with background music and interludes by Thomas Kerr, university organist. The public is invited.

W. A. White Improves

Rochester, Minn., Oct. 22 (AP).—Further improvement was noted today in the condition of William Allen White, Emporia, Kans., editor who two days ago underwent an abdominal operation at Colonial Hospital here.

Hugh Brannon's Funeral Monday; Killed in Crash

Dr. R. C. Gilmore, Retired Preacher, Dies in Bethesda

Dr. Robert Campbell Gilmore, 76, retired Presbyterian minister, died yesterday at his home, 5500 Huntington Parkway, Bethesda, after a week's illness.

A native of Fairfield, Va., he was educated at Hampden Sydney College in Virginia. Before moving to Bethesda in 1936, Dr. Gilmore had served in pulpits in Alabama, Virginia, and Georgia. Since his retirement he has done supply work in the District at Western Presbyterian Church and Georgetown Presbyterian Church.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Estelle M. Gilmore; a son, Lieut. Robert D. Gilmore, jr., stationed in Lincoln, Nebr., and two daughters, Mrs. George G. Chiles of Miami Beach, Fla., and Miss Virginia Gilmore of Bethesda.

Funeral services will be at the William Reuben Pumphrey Funeral Home in Bethesda on Monday.

John L. Lewis, Ill At Home, Is Better

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, who left his office Monday suffering from a heavy cold, was reported much improved yesterday by his brother A. D. (Denny) Lewis. He is still confined to his home, 614 Oronoco st., Alexandria.

It was at first reported Lewis' illness was menacingly close to bronchial pnumonia, but his brother assured reporters yesterday it was no more than a "heavy head cold to which he is subject." He would not predict when the patient might be out.

Lewis' illness prevented him from attending Thursday's session of the War Labor Board on the Illinois coal operators and Mine Workers proposed contract.

Marriott Elected By Restaurant Men

J. Willard Marriott, Washington restaurant man, yesterday was elected third vice president of the National Restaurant Association at its twenty-fifth meeting in Cleveland. Herbert H. Keller, also of Washington, was elected to the board of directors.

The convention raised $51,000 to finance a four-year course in restaurant management at Western Reserve University leading to a degree.

Japs Are Treating Prisoners Better

Cleveland, Oct. 22 (AP).—Germany is adhering to the rules of the Geneva Convention in its treatment of war prisoners and Japanese treatment is improving, reports Tracy Strong, secretary of the Prisoners' Aid Committee of the international division of the YMCA.

He predicts delivery of food parcels to Allied prisoners in Germany probably would decrease as the bombing of German transportation facilities continued.

New Church Will Open

Opening services in the new first unit of the Bethel Evangelical and Reformed Church, 4347 Lee blvd., will be held tomorrow, beginning with Sunday School at 9:45 a. m.

Dr. J. L. Barnhart of Baltimore, president of the Potomac Synod, will speak at 11 a. m. and Dr. Lee A. Peeler, pastor, will preside.

A preaching mission will be held October 25 and 26, with Dr. William Toth of Harrisburg, speaking. The congregation has been meeting temporarily in the Kate Waller Barrett School at 4400 North Hendersen rd.

Torahs Presented

Tomorrow at 8:30 p. m. the Arlington Jewish Community Center will receive two Torahs that have been presented to the Jewish Community of Arlington for use at its religious services. The Torah, or Scroll of Law, hand-written on sheets of parchment, is read at all Sabbath and Festival services observed by members of the Jewish faith.

The two Scrolls obtained by the Center were among several rescued from war-torn Europe and carry with them a tradition of several generations of European Jewry. Participating in the dedication ceremonies will be Mr. Abraham Beyda, who will present one Scroll in honor of his late father.

Rabbi Solomon Metz of Washington, through whose efforts the second Scroll was secured, and Rabbi Samuel H. Berkowitz, spiritual leader of the Arlington Jewish Community Center, will participate in the services. Rabbi Metz will address the members of the Jewish Community and their frends who are cordially invited to attend the dedication. The ceremonies will be held at the Center headquarters, 3150 Wilson blvd., Clarendon, and will begin promptly at 8:30 p. m. Mr.

I DIDN'T KNOW YOU KNEW ANYTHING ABOUT HORSES, PHIL! I'M A GREAT STUDENT OF FORM, DEVANNY—AND I KNOW THAT NAG! I'VE JUST MADE FIVE BUCKS—YOU'LL SEE!
I'LL PICK ONE THAT'LL BEAT YOU TOMORROW! WELL—I'LL BE HERE TOMORROW!
YOU'RE VERY QUIET TONIGHT, PHILIP—HAVE YOU SOMETHING ON YOUR MIND? I'LL SAY I HAVE! I'VE DISCOVERED HOW TO MAKE A LOT OF EXTRA MONEY!

MR. AND MRS. — Strategy on the Home Front — By Arthur Folwell and Ellison Hoover

DID YOU GET THAT NEW SHADE FOR THE BEDROOM WINDOW? YES, IT WAS ONLY 80 CENTS AND THE MAN PUT IT UP
THAT'S GOOD. IT WAS BEGINNING TO WEAR. MIGHT AS WELL HAVE A NEW ONE YES, I THOUGHT SO, TOO. BUT—ER—IT WAS WIDER THAN THE REST OF OUR WINDOW SHADES
WELL, WHAT OF IT? WHY, YOU CAN'T HAVE SHADES OF DIFFERENT WIDTHS, SO I GOT SOME OTHER SHADES TO MATCH
MY GOSH, HOW MANY? WELL, ALL TOLD, SEVEN ON THE FRONT OF THE HOUSE AND WE SHIFTED THE OLD ONES TO THE BACK. IT WAS GOOD ECONOMY

Russia Seen 1st in Europe After War

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, Oct. 22.—Jan Masaryk, foreign minister and vice president of Czechoslovakia, predicted today that the post-war lineup in Europe would see Russia as the greatest continental power, Germany virtually destroyed, France an anemic nation and Italy a "Punch and Judy affair."

Dr. Masaryk declared in an interview, that a powerful international organization capable of effectively coping with those nations that misbehave is essential to the peace of the world.

"I am definitely opposed to the balance of power theory," he said. "The poor small nations have been pulled apart and shuffled in the interest of so-called balance of power and then blamed for its failure."

The future world organization, Masaryk continued, should avoid the mistakes of the League of Nations "which had beautiful principles but no punch behind it."

Dr. Masaryk reported that word reaching him indicated that all Germany's satellite nations were decidedly in a "term-making mood."

Speaking of the Italian situation, Masaryk said that the "Czech people were bewildered at first by the granting of cobelligerency to the Italians." He asserted that "Czechoslovakia would be rather nervous if the rulers of certain other satellite countries like Hungary and Bulgaria were to become suddenly 'blue-eyed boys'."

Masaryk urged that Czechoslovakia and other small nations that are innocent victims of the war be granted at least B priorities at the peace table.

Register to Say Gen. MacArthur Unlikely to Retire

By the Associated Press

The Army and Navy Register, unofficial service publication, will say today that it is "inconceivable" the Administration will retire Gen. Douglas MacArthur when he reaches the statutory limit of 64 years next January 26, for these reasons:

"Entirely aside from his military attainments, his success with inadequate personnel and material in directing operations against the armed savages of Nippon, and the fact that he is ready to proceed further toward the realization of his ambition to lead a victorious Army into the Philippines, the political aspect is loaded with dynamite.

"General MacArthur, as is so well known, enjoys widespread admiration and popularity at home. In various polls recently taken, he stands well up on the lists of preferences for nomination for the Presidency on an anti-New Deal ticket. Nobody believes that the Administration, in such circumstances, would bring him home at any time before the presidential election in the autumn of 1944. So far as can be ascertained, General MacArthur himself wants to stay where he is until he has accomplished what he has set out to do."

Churchill Observes Daughter Under Fire

London, Oct. 22 (AP).—Prime Minister Churchill, who is always popping up in unusual places, paid a surprise visit to a London antiaircraft battery tonight during an air raid and saw his daughter help drive off German raiders.

The Prime Minister stepped into the control room as Subaltern Mary Churchill repeated the order to "fire."

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Antipoll Tax Senate Bill To Go on Trial

With all of the legal arguments and procedure of a court, the Senate Judiciary Committee will place the House-passed antipoll tax bill "on trial" for constitutionality at unique hearings Monday in the Senate caucus room.

Three spokesmen for the bill, and three chosen opponents, will be confined entirely to legal arguments in their testimony, with all evidence barred on "the merits." The committee agreed on this procedure recently before a final showdown on the bill, and Chairman Frederick Van Nuys said it will be strictly enforced.

Following the constitutionality test, the committee will vote on the bill, which last year split the Senate wide open in a Southern Democratic filibuster that killed the measure. Early this year the House repassed the poll tax ban, and a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee recently favorably reported it, 3 to 2.

Japs Claim Destruction Of 164 Planes, Ships

New York, Oct. 22 (AP).—Radio Tokyo said tonight that the Japanese have destroyed 164 Allied planes, 4 cruisers, 2 destroyers and other warships in the Southwest Pacific since September 1, while losing 49 of their own planes.

They also claimed 18 transports, 6 torpedo boats, 4 amphibious craft and other small vessels were sunk.

Father Accused

Baby's Death Is Ascribed To Violence

Pittsfield, Mass., Oct. 22 (INS).—A verdict of death "by violence" was returned today by Medical Examiner Albert C. England in the alleged "mercy killing" of six-month-old Lawrence S. Noxon.

Attorney John F. Noxon, Bay State attorney and father of the victim, has been charged with murdering his son.

Dr. England asserted the boy died of a current of electricity through his chest from forearm to forearm. He added that he found insulation scraped away, that "bright copper wire" showed through.

The State charges the infant was wearing a wet diaper when his father supposedly sat him in a metal tray and contacted his arm with an electric wire.

Dr. England said the Noxon family physician had told him the victim was a "mongoloid type" baby—that he could not creep, though he could move his arms and legs to some extent.

2 U. S. Merchantmen Sunk in Indian Ocean

The Navy reported yesterday the sinking of two medium-sized merchant vessels in the Indian Ocean last July. The survivors have arrived at San Francisco. The ships were torpedoed by enemy submarines.

Shot 11 Times, Bags 5 Planes

By the Associated Press

Denver, Oct. 22.—A 43-year-old Texas aerial gunner, a graduate of the armament school at nearby Buckley Field and a former Y. M. C. A. physical director is credited with shooting down five enemy planes from a flaming Flying Fortress—an engagement in which he was wounded 11 times.

The airman, First Sergt. Allen B. Huckabee of Temple, Tex., father of a 16-year-old boy, according to the Buckley field publication, The Armorer, "In a single engagement, shot down at least five enemy planes as his own Flying Fortress was falling under the attack of more than 100 German and Italian fighters.

"He bailed out of the flaming ship as it was spinning and was captured by the Italians on July 5. A few days later when Americans invaded Sicily and occupied Ragusa, they found him in an Italian hospital.

"He had been awarded the Air Medal, with Oak Leaf Cluster and the Purple Heart, up to August 21."
